

COMMUNITY DAIRY HERD DEVELOPMENT

(By R. F. Flint, N. D. Dairy Commissioner) The indications are that during the coming winter there will be considerable discussion of community dairy herd improvement...

One of the most pleasing endorsements of the circuit was the organization of another in the same county, at Flasher, and one in Burleigh County which is being perfected.

Organized community dairy herd improvement throughout the United States has been carried on chiefly along definite lines and these are known by the following names—Calf Clubs, Cow Testing Associations and Bull Associations.

A boys' and girls' dairy club is an organization in which each member owns a registered female calf. Each member is personally responsible to feed and care for his calf.

The purpose of dairy calf clubs is to assist in establishing better-bred and better-producing dairy herds, and to develop boy and girl members as stockmen.

Cow Testing Associations An association of dairymen for the purpose of regularly testing their cows for production is known as a cow-testing association.

Cow-testing associations do not take breed into consideration. They are democratic on this point. It is a question of production and return over feed cost regardless of breed.

Bull Associations A cooperative bull association is a farmers' organization whose purpose is the joint ownership, use and exchange of three or more high class bulls.

more years, and the very best bulls can be secured. Bulls of outstanding merit are preserved for their full period of usefulness.

In 1908 there were three bull associations in the United States, now there are 160. The average number of farmers to an association is 40, owning 5 bulls and 235 cows.

Breeding Circuit Associations Now let us see how the breeding circuit association combines the good features of a calf club, cow-testing association and a bull association in a real man-sized dairy herd-improvement organization.

Every member of a breeding circuit agrees to keep a record of the production and feeding of each cow regardless of breed. This is similar to the cow-testing rules.

Each member agrees to use a registered bull, and not to sell pure-bred females (excepting culls) until his entire herd is pure-bred and registered. The New Salem circuit does not provide for cooperative ownership of bulls.

The salary of the New Salem circuit superintendent was originally paid by the N. D. Agricultural College and the U. S. Department of Agriculture cooperating.

No feature of any livestock improvement organization is of greater importance than the employment of a competent and energetic superintendent. It is also important that they have some supervision from reliable livestock extension workers.

Days of Work and Travel in 1886 to Buy Baby Carriage Reminiscent of the early days in this region, Osmer Burleson, now living in Kensal recalls his efforts in 1886 to get a baby carriage, as reported in the Kensal Progress:

"If you think it's a big effort to go down and buy a carriage for your baby, read how Mr. and Mrs. Osmer Burleson got their first one. It was in 1886, two years after they had settled on their homestead, seven miles south of Kensal; the long summer days had come, they had a baby boy with no carriage and no cash to get one with."

Hottinger County Girl, Crack Live Stock Judge, Marries Accountant Miss Vesta Steer, who won international honors at Chicago five years ago by her ability to judge livestock and who shyly admitted at the time she probably would marry a farmer some day when she was "grown up" has married. But her husband is not a farmer.

He is Munroe Smith of Foreman, N. D., an accountant. Miss Steer was the only girl ever to complete a course at the N. D. A. C. at Fargo, her mother said, specializing in livestock and animal husbandry and graduating with honors. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. E. M. Steer of New Richland, Wis. She was born and reared on a farm near Mott. Her father died a year ago. He was a prominent rancher and later operated a successful cafe in Mott.

A Successful Life

A Successful Life The world doth say Of him who has much wealth. The glint of gold we all pursue And barter even health.

How did he gain this wealth Is what we should like to learn. Did he produce some useful thing And labor in his turn?

Or did he grind his fellow-men Yet deeper in the dust; Make their lives more barren still And hogrudge them every crust.

No thought for them but what they bring And add unto his gain. No thought for sorrows in the world That was better e'er he came.

But we can change this standard If each one does his part. And call a life successful That shows a gentle heart.

That lifts the weight of sorrow That dries the scalding tear; That helps the one who needs the help And fills the heart with cheer.

All hail to him with kindly heart Who takes but will also give; And leaves the world when his time comes A better place to lie.

NOT ONE BUT SEVEN SHORTEST DAYS, SAYS WEATHER MAN Ex.—Another pet tradition is knocked on the head by the weatherman, R. E. Spencer of Moorhead. The latest to meet with destruction at the hands of the weather prognosticator is that one shortest day in the year.

According to Mr. Spencer, whose favorite pastime is uprooting traditions which have survived the ages, we learn this year at least, there are just seven "shortest" days. Starting Monday and continuing over to Sunday, December 24, the days will be of the same length—measured by hours of sunshine—and on Christmas day the sun will shine one minute longer, continuing to add to its daily visit until next summer when the time again shortens.

The sun rose at 8:08 a. m. and set at 4:30 p. m. The sun rose one minute later Monday and will set one minute later Sunday. Thus adding one minute on the end of the day and taking it off in the morning maintains the equality between days, Mr. Spencer stated. The sun is this week shining eight hours and 31 minutes each day until Christmas day.

Firemen Soak Up Ash Pile The fire department was called to the St. Paul flats early Sunday morning to throw a stream of water on a pile of hot ashes that threatened to do some damage. It appears that the janitor has been throwing hot ashes out in the back yard and the night before the flat dwellers got up and put the re out themselves. When the janitor refused to throw water on the cinders the following night, the neighbors called up the fire department.
