Captured.

Part River Game.

Fred Mitchell and Frank Bisbee, who a few weeks ago run off mortgaged property belonging to H. J. Randall and several parties at Grafton, were arrested at Eau Claire, Wisconsin, one day last week with the three teams in their possession. It appears that after they had disposed of what wheat they had on hand, which was also mortgaged, they started with the teams and all movable truck for Sioux Falls, shipping the same to the place of their arrest. One of Mitchell's teams was bought of Mr. Randall some time this fall on time for $500. The property that Bisbee had in charge was not so valuable. Randall's horses arrived here on Saturday last. The prisoners are now in the Grand Forks jail and will await the action of the grand jury.

Solomon in the SNAKE.

When Solomon was asked to decide which of two women a child belonged to he called for his sword and proposed to cut the child in two and give a half to each; the real mother went into hysterics, and Solomon decided in her favor. But at the mixed court, a few mornings ago, an actual division was made, and Solomon's judgment was put in the shade. The chattel in dispute was a black dog, with his tail clipped bare except at the extremity, which retained a long hair. The dog was quite unconcerned, and went sniffing around the arena and under the court table at the magistrate's feet, or wherever his tether would allow him to extend his explorations. The claimants for the dog were a butcher and a washerman. The butcher's assistant held a string, with the dog at the end of it. The washerman held a basket in his hand containing hair which he had clipped from the dog's tail, and which he produced in proof of ownership. Mr. Howes, inspector of markets, stated that he had known the butcher for many years, and that he had seen the dog at his place; and that he believed the dog belonged to the butcher. It was also stated by the police that an experiment had been tried at Hongkong police station; the washerman called on the dog but it would not follow him. When the butcher called, the dog heard his master's voice and knew the sound thereof. As a last resort to prove that the dog loved him and belonged to him, the washerman pulled off his jacket and showed a plaster stuck between his shoulder blades, saying "The dog had had his plaster there. The magistrate decided in favor of the washerman so far that he was allowed to keep the basketful of hair, and the butcher was allowed to take the rest of the dog.—Shanghai Celestial Empire.

Life in Uruguay.

Uruguay has a delightful climate, temperate and pleasant. The mercury does not rise above eighty-five degrees. The climate is salubrious and the people are subject to no disease in particular. There are no malarial fevers and no cholera. The natives are remarkable for their refinement and intelligence. They have a large number of good schools and colleges. The revenue of the country is $4,000,000. Their exports amount to $1,200,000 and their imports to $900,000. Ten years ago they imported a few steamships, and a day later they depart from the port at Montevideo. The people are engaged largely in manufacturing and cattle herding. Half a million dollars' worth of cattle are killed each year for the hides. It is a strange thing, but the people there will not use a mare in any way. The street railway company put their before the cars and the people refused to ride in the cars. Fine animals of this kind, which would sell here for $150, are sold there for $5 and killed for their hides. The natives are enterprising and progressive.
