The Unexpected End.

The sad news of President McKinley's relapse was received in this city early Saturday morning and came as a thunderbolt from a clear sky. The favorable reports sent out from Buffalo had about dissipated all fears of a fatal termination of his illness and our people were, therefore, almost wholly unprepared for the report that a great change for the worst had taken place in the condition of the president. From the first receipt of the sad information, however, all seemed to feel that there was no hope and that the end could not be far distant. During the day there was repeated inquiry as to the latest news from the sick room at Buffalo and the telegraph office was besieged by those anxious to learn if there might not still be some foundation on which to base a hope that after all the nation's head might be spared.

But no encouraging word came and the people retired for the night feeling that before the light of another day dawned the soul of William McKinley would be in the presence of its Maker. Saturday morning they awoke to find their worst fears realized.

STORE NEWS.

The cold snap of the past week made trade brisk among those who patronize the advertising columns of the Inter-Ocean, and they all report winter goods just arrived in time. You may feel sure that what you buy from the merchants in this column is the best to be had.

George Getts: Just back from Chicago. Can't tell you all the nice things I purchased. We have the swellest line coming that ever stopped off at any place west of St. Paul. Furniture specialties in all lines; novelties that will do you good to see. All I ask is that you come in and see what I have and visit a while.

S. L. Wineman: This makes you think of what you have done with your summer's wages. But say, what's the use of sending away for combination suits. I have the latest and best. Dr. Wright's union suits for men are the only proper and healthy under garments to wear. Once you wear a combination suit you will never wear the other. Of course, I have them, too.

Edgar Hodgkinson: My fall line of toilet articles has arrived. I always have the latest novelties in this line in as complete an assortment as you can find in the cities. I have complete lines of stationery, perfumes and fancy articles.

Lyle M. Fisher: It keeps us busy answering the phone these days while people order us to send them up a steel range or a heater. Then everyone has us put up their stoves. Here is a sample: "B-r-r-r-Hello! Yes, this is Fisher. Put up your stove? All busy putting up stoves now; must have yours up?

All right; set it up right away."

Mann & Son: Busy is no name for it. And it is same way in every department of the store. For the past week people are buying things to keep them warm and you bet they know where to buy them. We have the nobbiest coats for ladies and gentlemen that were ever shown in the city. Nice tailor made and the latest New York ideas. We are always pleased to show them to you.

Adams Bros.: Talk about your swell heaters! Say, you just ought to see those Art Garlands. There are no better and no neater line. Just got in a complete assortment. They are absolutely and unquestionably the best. Then we have cheaper ones, too, if you wish.

T. A. Haslam: Too busy to talk. People are just beginning to realize that winter is coming and those who have not purchased their fruit to can and preserve can still do so if they preserve the utmost secrecy in sending in their order before the rush after each carload arrives.

Co-Operative Store: We are still in the rush, and are sending in orders by wire to fill the great demand for our goods. The store is only half large enough to accommodate the business we transact but we are abreast of the times in assortment and quality.

E. J. Chamberlin: All the latest in heavy dress goods. Not cheap, trashy and shoddy stuff, but the very best that money can buy at figures that astonish you. Come in and look over our stock.

Geo. Jamieson: Get one of those cosy warm robes to keep you from freezing on that long drive.

Superb Fall Stationery.

We do not know who sets the styles in stationery, but whoever it is has artistic judgment, as you will admit when you see our fall line. All the latest fads and fancies in paper; all that is new in design or color. An ample assortment to choose from.

Prices are as low as quality is high. Don't be content with old style stationery, or to limit your choice by picking from a stock less ample than ours.

You will feel the cold more this fall than ever on account of the pleasant summer.

Herman Huesgen: While in Buffalo I made the acquaintance of A. Lamponi, the leading jeweler of Florence, Italy, who was at the exposition in personal charge of his large display of Byzantine and Florentine mosaics, which are the rage throughout Europe and America. I became very well acquainted with Lamponi, conversing with him in French, and succeeded in purchasing from him a well selected assortment of mosaics at a lower price than he has sold to anyone else in this country. They are beautiful specimens and must be seen to be appreciated. On my way home I stopped in Chicago for a week and purchased many novelties for the holiday trade. My stock this year will be larger than ever before.

Mothers write us that they have solved the problem of keeping their children well. Give them Rocky Mountain Tea each week. A blessing to mother and child. Ask your druggist.
