

Scene From "That Little Swede"

At the Armory, Monday, November 27

Great Opera Company Coming

The Columbia Opera Company played a three nights' engagement at Minot and the Opic of that city, has the following to say:

No other play of recent years created the sustained interest among Minot's better people as that which was aroused by the Columbia Opera company in "Said Pasha" at the opera house last evening. A packed house tells the merits of the production which was the opening of a three nights engagement in this city. It may justly be said that a number of Minot opera lovers were somewhat suspicious regarding the quality of the Columbia Opera company and hence did not attend the Tuesday evening performance. This fear was no doubt caused by the fact that local people were badly duped several months ago when they gave up their good money to witness what they supposed was to be a first class presentation of light opera by the Andrews Opera company.

However, if there were any in the audience last evening who might have entertained such fears they were soon dispelled and when the company had finished its first chorus the audience realized that that they had at last been given the long looked for opportunity of witnessing something of a high order. The opportunity was thoroughly appreciated and the presentation was accepted with hearty applause as the various stars made their appearance.

It is but fair to Manager C. N. Holmes to state that the company which he presented here last evening is unquestionably the best ever seen in this city and was well deserving of the large and representative audience which gathered to spend a delightful evening listening to "Said Pasha."

Stanley Felch, the comedian, is as funny as ever and it is "Willie Collier, the second," kept the audience in an uproar of laughter. His work last evening was fully as clever as when he made his final appearance with the Tivoli Opera company in New York city. His irresistible face and basso profundo voice were features of the production and whenever there was something wanting, this star was always there with the goods.

Miss Charlotta Gilman, the prima donna, late of the Foxy Quiller company, made her first appearance here last evening and her work was never below the standard. She was in perfect voice and her rendition of that famous Bargomaster ballad, "I love You," called forth prolonged applause.

For a tenor of ability, Mr. C. N. Holmes, is the best who ever appeared in Minot. He won the audience in his first appearance upon the stage when he sang the "Desert Song," in a very beautiful manner. This selection gave Mr. Holmes an excellent chance to display his cultivated voice. The audience was not satisfied with one rendition and the singer was obliged to respond to an encore.

Alonzo Chaney, the comedian, who was Stanley Felch provided the genuine comedy of the piece, showed himself to be an artist fun-making and together with his pal, was always enthusiastically welcome. Miss Friedy Tittle the soubrette, who was a former member of the Floradora company, made a very favorable impression as did also Maurice Wish and M. G. Rayfield. In fact it almost impossible to single any one member of the company in preference to any other member. They each have exceptional ability in their own particular line and they were all first class. The chorus was certainly a surprise to local theater goers for the Columbia Opera company's chorus can sing and dance in a manner that entertains the audience every minute they are on the stage.

This evening the company will present that beautiful three act comic opera, "Ermine," which is considered the best piece in their repertoire.

New Firm Of Undertakers

E. W. Gilbertson has purchased the Nimmo undertaking business and will give special attention to this line of work in the future. O. R. Miller, who for some time has been with Mr. Gilbertson, will have charge of the undertaking work. He has had a large experience in this line, and possesses in a remarkable degree, what so many undertakers lack—human sympathy.

Philadelphia.—Papers contained in two drift casks set afloat in the polar seas six years ago have just been returned to Henry G. Bryant, president of the Geographical Society of Philadelphia, under whose direction the experiment was made. A report of their wanderings was made by Mr. Bryant at the monthly meeting of the society in Witherspoon hall.

These casks were two of 37 set adrift at various points in the Arctic regions during the summers of 1899, 1900 and 1901. The idea originated with Admiral Melville, who suggested it to the society in 1897.

One of these casks was found by fishermen on the northern coast of Siberia early last summer. They passed it on to civilization when the opportunity arose and officials of one of the Siberian towns returned the inclosed papers to Philadelphia. Each of the casks contained letters in all known languages, requesting the finder to fill out the blanks, giving date and place and other information, and to return the papers to Philadelphia. Money for postage was inclosed in every cask.

This cask was found only 380 miles from where it was set adrift six years ago, 95 miles northwest of Randall's Island. Its course was in an entirely different direction from what had been expected.

The second cask recovered had drifted from Cape Barrow on the Alaskan coast, where it had been left on ice, to the northern coast of Iceland, and was recovered by sheep herders a few months ago. It proved without doubt what was partly demonstrated by Nansen's ship, the Fram, and the Jeannette that a newly found current flows over or around the pole, coming down between Spitzbergen and Greenland into the northern Atlantic.

In the direct line over the polar cap the cask was 2,500 miles from its starting point, but it had probably drifted in a circular course more than 3,000 miles.

KING OUSTED FROM ESTATE

Emperor Francis Joseph Has Been Evicted from Austria-Hungary Hunting Seat.

Paris.—Emperor Francis Joseph has been evicted from a hunting estate in Hungary. The emperor had for some years past leased from the municipality of Budapest an estate at Godollo, where he has been in the habit of spending a month or two every autumn.

The lease being on the point of expiration, the municipality, in reply to the emperor's request for its renewal, dispatched a message to the imperial court curtly stating that they had decided to put up the estate for public auction.

His majesty, through the medium of a representative, then made an offer for the renewal of the lease, but was outbid several times by other intending tenants, until the price had risen to enormous proportions.

On behalf of the emperor, the deputy, M. Hedervary, then proposed a compromise, and asked that the municipality should bind itself not to permit any hunting in the locality during the emperor's sojourn at the Villa de Godollo, which is his majesty's private property.

This request was flatly refused, the municipality formally declaring that "it could not compel the population to show so much consideration toward the sovereign."

The syndicate formed for the acquisition of the estate thereupon deposited £4,000 with the municipality toward the rental, the chairman declaring that the property should be withdrawn from the emperor's tenancy at any price.

An old subscriber of the Inter-Ocean states that he thinks Miss Mabel Daeley is the "first young lady to marry who was born in Ramsey county. It would be an interesting point of history to know, and the Inter-Ocean invites its readers to discuss the matter through its columns.
