Fitting Tribute Paid To Memory of Dead Heroes

Splendid Programs Given at The Cemetery and in The Opera House on Tuesday, Memorial Day--Extracts From Addresses

Devils Lake citizens paid fitting tribute to the memory of the vast army of patriots who by their devotion united the two halves of this great country into one firm and cemented commonwealth. Despite the glooming weather, the streets were well lined with people by the time the martial strains of the local band announced the formation of the parade. With the sturdy militia boys in their neat khaki uniforms, the old veterans in their faded blue and bronze badges, the W. R. C. proudly carrying the national colors and the long line of carriages and automobiles bearing the citizens, the procession was an inspiring one.

At the cemetery an appropriate and timely program was carried out, including an address by Rev. Clattenberg, a prayer and the volleys over the graves of the departed heroes.

Rev. Clattenberg said in part: We meet to do honor to the memory of our courageous brothers, dead and alive. It is not enough that we think of the dead only. We draw lessons from the deeds of those who have gone from us that teach us who are living how we should act in times that are momentous. It is too late now to go into the details of the Civil War, or the War with Spain; we know not really all the forces that were at work to bring about those days of planning and killing. There were moments on each side that saw deeds committed which never should have been committed. There were words said by many mouths that would have been better left unsaid. The purpose of many hearts God doubtless would have changed, if His doing so would not have put man down to the level of a machine. The men of the Civil War days were merely men, living up to the light which they had; they do not deserve to be condemned for what they did. Those of them who have gone deserve only our prayers and our praise. They fought a good fight, they maintained the dignity and honor of their country, they did their part in that state to live to which they were called of God. All praise be to them.

The world has moved very far from wars since the days in which our veterans fought. The State Department is about to sign a Treaty with Great Britain that will end all wars among English speaking peoples. All the great powers have entered into some agreement to signify their intention of getting rid of wars, so expensive in wealth and lives. It should be the duty and aim of every citizen and soldier to hasten the day when peace will reign in the hearts of all men. Nations should be applauded when they take some move that tends to put war out of commission. The minds of all men should be directed toward the day when wars shall cease entirely. How sad we should be when we hear of any lingering trace of ill will against any of the men who were engaged in the Civil War! The war is ended, it should be the wish and aim of all engaged in it to bring peace and harmony throughout the fair land in which we live. When the Southerners wanted to place the statue of General Lee in the Halls of Congress it was a blow to the lovers of peace to see the remnant of the Grand Army of the Republic protesting against it. It is a sign of nobility when a man forgives his enemy, and gives him his hand and heart. It is a sign of narrow-mindedness when a man fails to do this. General Lee's memory is green in the South, and well it may be. He was to the people of the Southern states just what Abraham Lincoln was to the people of the North. When the war was ended there was no North and no South, there was a united Republic. But when we claim the right to remember Abraham Lincoln, we should not deny to the people of the Southland the right to remember Robert E. Lee. We show our loyalty to the Prince of Peace; He who came humbly to earth in order that He might make all men one in heart and in purpose. The world has indeed moved since the days of the Civil War. Today such a war would be impossible. It would not be impossible if we listened to the jingoes of the Country; but thank God the jingoes do not rule. We have a government that knows enough to retain its military and warlike aspect on the exterior when within it is full of love and good will toward men. Armies and navies must be maintained as police forces; it is right that they should; but the day has passed, please God, when this country will send out to be killed the flower of the land. We who remain should bestir ourselves in order that other nations will come to the same mind. England and the United States stand out as the first nations that deliberately agree not to go to war on any pretext whatsoever. Arbitration will be the sword and the shot used hereafter. Peace and harmony are more desirable than the possession of material wealth, or the satisfying of possibly damaged honor. We thank God for our soldiers of the past; may they rest in peace! But we pray God to keep the soldiers of the present and of the hereafter from the historic occupation of those of the past."

In the afternoon before a packed house the regular Memorial Day service was held. Recitations and songs opened the program.

Attorney J. J. Samson in an eloquent eulogy to the memory of the departed soldiers said in part:

This is the day of mystic memories. Once more we are gathered with the battle scarred veterans of a hundred conflicts, the living brave, to pay loving tribute to the heroic dead. Even as Alexander the Great paused for a moment in his conquest of the world to pay tribute at the grave of Ulysses, so today the American people pause for a moment in the mad rush of a commercial and civic activity to worship at the shrine of their dead.

From the silence of sorrowful hours The desolate mourners go, Lovingly laden with flowers

Alike from the friend and the foe; Under the sod and the dew, Waiting the Judgment Day, Under the roses the blue, Under the lilacs the gray.

*This is the day of patriotic inspiration and on this day we delight to dwell on the splendor and the triumphs of war and to recount the achievements of the great warriors and military heroes whose achievements shed lustre on the pages of history. We picture the glorious triumph of a returning victorious army receiving the welcome of a grateful people. But in the midst of all this our thoughts revert to those who did not come home. The countless thousands who went forth to battle never to return, who gave the fullest measure of their devotion, their life, for home and country, who died on the old camp-ground and whose grave is today marked by no monument but only a little slab of white with the simple, tragic inscription--"UNKNOWN." With bowed head and tear-dimmed eyes we stand today at the grave of our unknown dead and thank God for the courage and patriotism of those who there Sleep the sleep that knows not breaking; Morn of toil or night of waking. *Sleep on, unknown dead. Over your unmarked grave at twilight the song birds sing their sweetest melodies and upon it falls with a lingering caress the last ray of the setting sun. Your funeral hymn was the booming of cannon; your shroud a blood-stained coat of blue; your monument your country--one country--grand, glorious and free. God rest you well for in your hallowed dust are shrouded a country's hope and fame and trust.

Attorney F. T. Cuthbert, who delivered the Memorial Address, said in part: I cannot add to what has been said in times past in paying tribute to the veterans of the civil war. No, indeed; for all that can be expressed by human tongue has been said by those who have had the ability to clothe their thoughts and ideas in the most beautiful and classical language. There is no power given to man to repay you for the services you have rendered; there is no language that can express it; your reward must come from an all-wise providence. When I think of those who fell on the gory battle-fields of the south, with their last thoughts upon the loved ones at home, so many miles away, without even the consolation of knowing what benefit would come from their patriotic acts, but away from friends and loved ones, in the desolation and gloom of the grim battlefield, giving their all for home and country, then I am reminded how good our Creator has been to you in sparing you to see not only the final triumph at Appomattox, but the glories of subsequent history. To you it has fallen to see once again a united people living in harmony under a common flag, with a unity of purpose to perpetuate the nation to the cause of liberty and civilization, and when that hour arrives that must so soon come to all of you, and you gaze for the last time upon the land you have loved and served so well, and there steals over your soul the consciousness of having served your country so well in her dark and perilous hour, and of having contributed so much to the cause of God and humanity, then will you fully realize the reward of an heroic life.

It was not alone the fact that you were brave soldiers in battle, for every age has had its war heroes, and many an army has left a record of courage and valor in an unworthy cause, but what a difference; in the one you have the case of men trained to war, who made fighting a business and followed at least to a large extent the brute instinct to win in combat, in the other you have men raised to peace, trained for the pursuits of husbandry, their ideals the home, men who loved right, these, leaving wife, mother, home to engage in the greatest of wars, fighting unto death, to firmly establish a government "Of the people, by the people, and for the people."

We too have a country to serve and fight for. You preserved it for us. It remains to be seen whether sordid ambition or inordinate political ambition shall so blind us that we shall lose sight of all that is best in life, and strangle within us the higher impulses of the soul. It has been said that our country is corrupt. I believe that it is the best of any country in any time. True, there are evils, but how much less is the cost to oppose them than what you paid. You fought with bullets; we with ballots, and to you we owe it that our ballots shall be as effective as your bullets, if we vote honestly. Yes, more; we must vote intelligently. The man who does not vote is unworthy to bear the name American, yet is desirable and is less dangerous than he who votes, ignorant of men and issues. We must not because of an evil become panic stricken and in eradicating the evil destroy the government itself. In this day of "fads" and "isms" let us not lose sight of the fundamental principles of American liberty. It is not mere political machinery that we need, but better Americans to use what we have. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, some one said. Let us always fight corrupt men and vicious methods, cost what it may. It is the individual that counts, the nation is good or bad as is the individual. Lincoln was great, yet he was only a man, borne to the pinnacle of honor, fame and power by a crisis. He felt the patriotic impulses of millions, which inspired, electrified an thrilled his great soul until he became more divine than human; he crystallized and made practical the thoughts and ideas of his time, and made the hopes, the prayers, the yearnings, of countless souls a reality. He did it because hundreds of thousands of his fellow citizens by their sacrifice made it possible for him to do it.

T. W. Sullivan, who lives near Wood Lake was in the city on Wednesday on business. Mr. Sullivan reports the condition of the farms in his vicinity as the best he ever saw.

LITTLE EFFECT ON LONDON PRICES

TOBACCO DECISION DOES NOT INFLUENCE THAT MARKET.

London, May 31.—The decision of the United States supreme court, holding the American Tobacco Co. to be a combination in restraint of trade and a monopoly in violation of law, had little effect on American securities here yesterday and prices opened a fraction higher. Other influences, however, affected specialties. The cut in steel prices sent United States steel shares 1 point below parity, but these losses were partly recovered by noon.

GOOD CORN CROP IS PROMISED

NORTH DAKOTA YIELD TO BE TRIPLED—GOOD CONDITIONS ARE GENERAL.

St. Paul, Minn., May 31.—Corn that promises to reach full maturity before frost can get it in the fall is growing in many fields this year along the lines of the Great Northern road in North Dakota, and according to reports to the office of W. P. Kenney, traffic manager, the outlook is for a production of feed-stuff far in excess of the average. J. G. Woodworth, traffic manager of the Northern Pacific, has reports of the same nature. North Dakota, which has never figured as important in corn production promises this year to produce three times as much as ever before.

The Minneapolis and St. Louis road has patches of corn along its lines in South Dakota that show advanced growth. H. J. Wagen, superintendent of the Chicago & Northwestern road at Winona, reports all crops in excellent condition. The Chicago, Great Western has the best corn prospect ever known in southern Minnesota and northern Iowa. On the new line of the Milwaukee, according to reports to the office of Supt. J. H. Foster, there has been much corn put in, which is in a fine stage of growth.

Prof. A. D. Wilson, O. M. Olson and C. P. Bull, of the agricultural college, whose duties have taken them over the state extensively in the past few days, report that the crop outlook is very good. Yellow Medicine and Lac Qui Parle counties will need rain soon, but are not suffering for lack of it.

TO HOLD A MEETING

BIG GATHERING OF LOCAL ELKS TO BE HELD SATURDAY EVENING.

Preparations will be made tomorrow evening at the meeting of the local lodge of Elks for the big doings at Grand Forks the end of the month when the state association of the antlered tribe will gather for their first annual meeting. Grand Forks lodge promises to outdo itself in the line of entertainment and with the memory of the big time given the delegates in this city on June 25th, there will have to be some program in order to set a new record. The Devils Lake Elks will go with a big delegation and will have several features to present for the edification of the other lodges. As the baby lodge every effort will be made to create a sensation and there is little doubt but what one can be created with the material at hand. Several delegations from out of town are expected to be in attendance on Saturday night.

MUST PAY UP NOW

BASEBALL DIRECTORS ANXIOUS TO HAVE SUBSCRIPTIONS PAID IN NOW.

It is "Settling Day" for the Devils Lake citizens who signed the baseball subscription list and the directors are anxious to have the donors come through with as little trouble as possible. The first month's salaries of the team fell due this week and the money is needed. Those who subscribed and have not as yet paid up will confer a favor upon the management by calling at the office of Steve Jones and leaving their money.

PLAN CHAIN OF GAME PRESERVES

MICHIGAN MAN INTERESTED IN SERIES FROM GULF TO ARCTIC REGION.

New Orleans, La., May 31.—A chain of game preserves, extending from the Gulf of Mexico to the Arctic regions, is an ambitious plan revealed by the recent gift to the state of Louisiana of a preserve of twenty square miles of marsh meadow lands by Charles Willis Ward of Michigan and Edward Avery McIlhenny of Avery Island, La. "The plans devised by Mr. McIlhenny and myself," said Mr. Ward here today, "is to establish zones of refuge along the coast in lines of migratory flights, extending all the way to the grounds of water fowls. The Nippon forest and game preserve, comprising about 4,000,000 acres, affords a handsome beginning in Western Canada and it is expected that the Dominion will establish another mammoth fowl breeding preserve west of Hudson bay. It thus remains for the states in the Mississippi watershed to establish preserves connecting the gulf and Canada."

M'GURREN LOST MATCH

CRARY WRESTLER THROWN BY DORAN IN SHORT FALLS—DORAN CHALLENGED.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 31.—Ed. Doran of Crystal last night took two straight falls from P. H. McGurren of Crary, winning the state middleweight championship and a side bet of $100 by the victory. The time of the first fall was eight minutes and of the second, six minutes. The match was witnessed by the largest crowd that ever witnessed a wrestling match in Grand Forks. Both men had brought several hundred admirers from their respective localities to see the clash, and enthusiasm was rampant on the part of the spectators to say the least. Although of short duration, the bout was the hardest staged in years. Both men were out for blood, straining every nerve and muscle every instant, constantly on the lookout for surprises and taking advantage of every little slip on the part of each other. McGurren proved to be a good loser. The Crary druggist was not backward about congratulating his opponent in a hearty way and said that the Crystal artist was in entirely different shape than a year ago, when the two men met. And Doran was. Generally weighing about 165 pounds stripped, he tipped the scales at about 153 last evening, and outside of a little upset of the stomach in the first fall, his condition never seemed to be better. McGurren, on the other hand, had taken off weight too fast, and this probably accounts for his lack of aggressiveness. McGurren has removed about eighteen pounds of superfluous flesh in less than a month—too fast to leave a man in tip top shape. Walter Quigley refereed the main bout.

Simpson Challenges. Prof. Dan Simpson, former instructor in wrestling at the University of Minnesota, challenged Doran after the match and the challenge was accepted.

DELIVERED ORATION

JUDGE COWAN DELIVERS SPLENDID ORATION AT RUGBY ON MEMORIAL DAY.

Rugby, N. D., May 30.—Memorial Day was fittingly celebrated in this city today with one of the biggest crowds present known in the history of the town. The services in the forenoon at the cemetery were impressive and the hall was packed during the program in the afternoon. Judge John F. Cowan of Devils Lake delivered the Memorial Address, which was a stirring one and well received.

Next Monday will witness the launching of the new daily edition of The Devils Lake World. The working force has been secured and though part of the new equipment has not yet arrived there will be no delay in the new publication.

As announced in last week's issue the plan is now controlled by Mitchell and Stedman, who have leased it from The World Publishing Company, and both the weekly and daily editions will be issued under their management, which will also cover the manufacturing department.

R. E. Austin, who for the past eight months has been manager of the Inter-Ocean, has been secured as city editor and can be depended upon to give to the people of Devils Lake plenty of reliable and interesting news matter. Mr. Austin has been engaged in the daily game since 1904 when he was employed as golf correspondent for the Chicago Tribune. Since 1906 he has been a resident of this state. For two years he was editor and part owner of the Tower Tribune, going from there to Williston, where he acted as city editor of the State. Prior to coming to Devils Lake he was sporting editor of the Grand Forks Times and editor of the Valley View of East Grand Forks.

Chas. Jenne, formerly with the Minneapolis Tribune and St. Paul Dispatch, will assist in the business department. He is an experienced advertising and circulation man and will prove a valuable addition to the force.

The World will be issued in the afternoon and will be distributed by carrier to all parts of the city. It will have a thoroughly reliable telegraph service, a good state wire service and will endeavor to give its readers all of the news of the city and county.

MAY USE OIL ON THE STREETS

CITY COUNCIL TO CONSIDER USING OILER INSTEAD OF STREET SPRINKLER.

C. K. Hills and W. H. Meyers, representatives of the Standard Oil company, were in the city Wednesday conferring with the members of the city council relative to the use of a new preparation manufactured by the Standard Oil company, on the streets of Devils Lake. The preparation if used on the streets will, it is claimed, lay the dust and harden them like asphalt. The treatment is a inexpensive one and does away with the necessity of using water on the streets. The preparation is now being used in Valley City, Oakes, Fessenden and other North Dakota cities and is said to be most successful.

According to the representatives the cost will not exceed the price paid for the use of the sprinkler and will prove far more effective. Under the new plan, if adopted, the sprinkling cart would be used in the residence parts of the city where it has not been for several seasons.

The matter will be brought up for final disposition next Monday at the regular meeting of the council.

INSTITUTE NEW LODGE

DEVILS LAKE TO HAVE LOCAL COURT OF INDEPENDENT ORDER OF FORESTERS.

Mr. C. L. Riley, state manager of the Independent Order of Foresters, is in the city this week organizing a local court of that order in Devils Lake. Mr. Riley is very optimistic regarding the outlook and claims that the prospects indicate a large and flourishing organization in this city.

The Foresters is a strong order providing for straight life insurance, sick and funeral benefits and old age pensions. A Tuberculosis and Orphans' Homes are maintained by the order. Mr. Riley is making an offer of free initiatory fee for the charter members, the cost of the examination by the physician being the only cost. Drs. Dahl and McCracken are the order's medical advisors and a visit to them will place your name on the list.
