"CHRIST IS RISEN"—A JOYOUS EASTER MESSAGE.

Easter is the queen of festivals. It is the commemoration of a supreme historic fact, the revelation of a supreme religious truth, the inspiration of a supreme spiritual consolation, the force of a supreme moral motive. Of Christ's resurrection the apostles, the early disciples, were witnesses. His death upon the cross had filled them with anguish and despair. But when the news on that first bright Easter morning spread from lip to lip, "The Lord hath risen, indeed, and appeared unto Peter," then was their sorrow turned into a rapture of joy. The tumultuous notes of that great Easter chorale have rolled through all after ages their unspeakable gladness. That resurrection, that triumph over death, has changed all the destinies and brightened all the life of mankind throughout the world during the nineteen centuries which since have passed.—Dean Farrar.

EASTER BUNNY IS OLD.

Not a Frisky Young Animal, but One with a Very Ancient History. Next to the Easter eggs the bunny maintains its place as the star Easter novelty. To find out just how the bunny came to be associated with Easter one looks away back to antiquity, for the hare or rabbit has had unusual significance to many peoples. In ancient mythology the hare's connection with the moon was well established. Hindu tradition tells us that while Indra was dying of hunger the hare threw himself into the fire in order that the god might be provided with a meal. For this sacrifice he was translated to the moon by the grateful Indra. In Buddhist legend we again find him sacrificing himself in order to provide food for the hungry. Here again he was translated to the moon, where the Hindus, Japanese and Chinese still affect to see him in the well known spots on the disk.

The Chinese still, at their great moon festival of the Yueping, exchange cakes of various sizes with relatives and friends upon which are stamped figures of hares crouching among the trees.

In Norse mythology we had bunny figuring as the train bearer and light bearer of Freyja, the goddess of the moon, and also identified with the Roman goddess Venus, whose festival was held at the beginning of April. Freyja has also been identified with the Anglian goddess Eostre or Ostara, from whose name we derive our present term of Easter.

Ancient records will show that in the seventeenth century no Englishman thought his feast complete unless on Easter day he ate a fine big hare killed for the occasion.

The hare by reason of its connection with the moon became in a sense the herald of a new life, the springtide. From these several causes it has come to be associated with the anniversary of Christ's resurrection, and thousands of children too young to appreciate the blessed truths that lie at the base of the faith will nevertheless rejoice over novelties in Easter bunnies.

Hint For Hog Raisers.

If the cobs are raked up and burned in the hog lot the hogs will eat the charcoal, and you will be doing two things—you will be getting rid of an inconvenience when it comes to cleaning out the hog yard and you will be giving the hogs a good feed that acts as sort of a tonic and helps to regulate digestion.

Pumpkins For Live Stock.

Pumpkins are worth, approximately two-thirds as much as ensilage for cows or sheep. Brood sows will make good use of them, writes H. P. Miller in the Ohio Farmer. In the ration of fattening hogs they should occupy about the same place as grass. Perhaps $2 per ton would be a fair money value to place upon field pumpkins for feeding cattle, sheep or hogs. It will be noted that they contain so much water that no animal should be confined a pumpkin alone.
