

AT THE GRAND JOHN BARYMORE

John Barymore, who made his first appearance in motion pictures thru the medium of the Famous Players production of "An American Citizen" a film comedy that recorded a sensational success in motion picture circles now returns to the Famous Players program in H. A. Du Souchet's famous comedy success, "The Man From Mexico." Mr. Barymore depicts the character of Fitzhew, the gay young married man who still longs for the cabarets and other delights of his bachelor days, and thereby, gets himself into dreadful dilemmas from which he extricates himself only by the most wonderful inventions possible to even an untruthful man. All the delicious humor of Mr. Barymore's delightful personality is at its best in his portrayal of the light-hearted and light-headed, bibulous Fitzhew, whose mythical adventures in Mexico the comedy so laughably unfolds.

Clementine Fitzhew decides to spend a night with her mother, but happening to overhear her husband planning a wonderful time at the Cafe Cleopatra with his friend and boon companion to the gay cafe and watch hubby. Fitzhew and Majors betake themselves in blissful ignorance to the Cleopatra Majors, she determines to follow them and proceed to partake not wisely but too well of the flowing bowl. A picture of Clementine falls from Fitzhew's wallet, and is seized by Paquita, a Spanish dancer, who keeps it to tease Fitzhew. Majors persuades Fitzhew to leave while still able to walk, and as they depart Clementina, veiled, accompanied by Farrar, the District Attorney's nephew, who is in love with Sallie, Fitzhew's sister, enter. At this juncture the place is raided, and Clementina and Farrar manage to escape, after giving fictitious names to the police; but Clementina's face is seen by Louis, the waiter, who is arrested because he refuses to give her description to the officer. On his way home the joyful but unsteady Fitzhew engages in battle with a cabman, and Fitzhew and the cabby are arrested and taken to court, where Fitzhew talks too much and is given thirty days on the island. When Fitzhew finally realizes what has happened he is at his wits' end to account for the thirty days' absence to his wife, and being allowed by the authorities to say farewell, tells her he is going to Mexico for a month. Clementina, afraid of being apprehended on account of the raid, and not wishing any one to know of her own jaunt, is with difficulty restrained from going with him.

From now on, Fitzhew's adventures on the "Island," among his fellow-prisoners, his attempts to play on the love of the District Attorney's nephew for Sallie, his discovery that the Warden has the picture of Clementina, stolen by Paquita, and is in love with Mrs. Fitzhew, his hungry attempts to steal food from the other convicts, his meeting with Louis, the waiter at the Cleopatra, who wants to kill the warden and escape, the visit of Clementina to the prison not knowing her husband is there, and the melodramatic jail delivery, culminating in Fitzhew's triumphant recapture of the escaping prisoners and his congratulations by the authorities, leaves nothing to be desired in the way of mirth-provoking situations. His return home at the end of thirty days in Mexican costume, with a handbook of the Spanish language; his getting into more tangles, and cleverly getting out again; and his hoodwinking Clementina to the end, furnish the funniest finish to one of the funniest farces ever written.

Rev. Quigley, presiding elder for the Methodist church for this district, preached in the local church here Sunday morning. He left in the afternoon for his Grand Forks home.

POPLAR GROVE

Over sixty people attended the dance at Charles Peterson's home on Friday evening. The musicians were Albert and Esther Olson, Leland and Bonnie Deaney.

Mrs. Homer Weed expects Mr Weed home in a few days. Mr Weed has been in the east visiting relatives. He was accompanied by his daughter, who will remain in the east and attend school.

Moses Bail's hounds who have in the past established a reputation as wolf hunters are keeping up their record. They caught four last week.

Misses Carabelle Palmer and Hilda McDonnell made their weekly trip to Devils Lake to take their music instruction.

Miss Edna Fugle has gone to Archer, Montana, to finish her term of school. She was accompanied by her niece, Leah Michels, also of Archer.

Ben Devaney, who is spending the winter with his brother, an editor at Hettinger, is feeling fine and believes the change of climate is doing a good deal towards restoring his health, which has caused some anxiety.

The many friends of John Fugle are sorry to learn that he is ill.
