WILD SCENES ON FLOOR OF HOUSE

Question of State Owned Elevators Cause of Trouble.

FARMERS ARE OUT IN FORCE

Debate Marked by Exchange of Bitter Personalities Between Legislators and Others.

Bismarck—(Special)—When the legislature reconvened after its week's recess it came together with a bang, and the opening day was marked by a scene the like of which has seldom been witnessed at any previous session. Before proceeding to an account of the climax on the floor of the house it is best to look back into history and recount the steps that led up to the remarkable exhibition before mentioned. North Dakota has long believed that the grain grading system of her sister state was inimical to the farmers of this state; that the officials in charge have been under the control of the grain gamblers of the Twin Cities, and that under this system the farmers of this state have been robbed of millions of dollars in years gone by. This feeling was not at all allayed on the showing made by United States Senator F. J. McCumber, when he introduced his bill to provide for federal grain grading, and when in arguing for his measure he showed how little of No. 1 hard wheat ever reached Twin City markets and how millions of bushels of grain graded as No. 1 hard was sold by Twin City grain dealers. So great became the agitation that a remedy was proposed in having North Dakota build her own terminal elevators in Minnesota or Wisconsin, or both. It was necessary to amend the state's constitution to accomplish this, and in 1909 the proposed amendment was ratified by the legislature, as it was by the 1911 legislature. The matter was submitted to the people in 1912 and carried with more than 37,000 majority. In 1913 the legislature, to carry out the program, provided for the levy of a tax of one-eighth of a mill, the money so raised to be used in the building of the proposed elevators. The same chapter made it the duty of the state board of control of penal and charitable institutions to investigate the matter of location of such buildings, the cost of buildings and sites, and to submit plans for the equipment, machinery, methods and rules for their operation, together with recommendations as to the most favorable locations.

The Board's Report—In compliance with the law the board made a voluminous report, which was nothing more or less than a large, heavy, wet blanket upon the whole affair. The board decided and recommended that such an elevator be not built; that it would and could not benefit the state or its farmers; that its cost would be far beyond what the state could afford, if it were to be at all efficient, and that the cost of its upkeep would be a burden that neither the state nor its farmers would care to shoulder. Further the board cited the example of the Canadian government's attempt along this line and asserted that the attempt had proven a failure in all respects.

Another Amendment—This was not the only terminal elevator plan. In 1914 and 1913 another proposed amendment was approved by the two legislatures, providing for the erection and maintenance of terminal elevators within the state. This amendment was voted on at the general election in 1914 and received a majority in proportion to its elder brother of 1912.

Then the Deluge—The farmers of the state, and particularly those belonging to farmers' organizations such as the Society of Equity, were certain that relief was in sight through legislation that would be enacted under the whole, revised three of them and placed them on general orders. They have a good chance of passage in the senate.

Hall Insurance—It is evident that the farmers are demanding a larger portion of the attention of this session than any previous one. Petitions are now coming in asking for the passage of a proposed amendment to the constitution which will place a tax on all real estate, other than that within cities and villages, which tax is to be used for the purpose of paying losses to crops by hail. The state has a hail insurance department, but it does not pay a full loss and the state demands cash with order, whereas the private corporations accept promissory notes for premiums and pay losses in full. It is therefore unsatisfactory, and the new remedy is asked.

Enforcement Commissioner—House bill 71 would create the office of enforcement commissioner, entrusting him with the work of enforcing the prohibition law, laws against the social evil, gambling and the like. A similar law passed in 1909 was declared unconstitutional, but this bill has been carefully drawn to avoid the same fate. JOHN ANDREW.

all unamilitary, that long column of marching men. Talk about the "embattled farmers" of the Revolution—there was more than half a hint in this that the race had not died out. The galleries, lobbies and every vacant space was filled when the arguments began, Loftus speaking first. He tore the board of control report to shreds, and, not content with that, touched with no gentle hand upon the personal alignment of members of the legislature and their reasons for it. He was answered by Treadwell Twichell, and the debate grew fast and furious. Loftus classed Twichell as being allied with the "interests," with being crooked, and with using his position as leader to dominate the members and browbeat them. Mr. Twichell replied that he would not believe Loftus under oath, that his career as a farmer for thirty years hardly earned him the title of crook, and he referred the question of browbeating to the members before him. It was sensational in the extreme, exciting, tense and sincere. The bursts of applause evidenced the strain the galleries were laboring under. But cold second thought on the morning after, cannot see where it has advanced the cause of terminal elevators one inch.

The After Meeting—The same evening, at the Commercial club down town, Loftus addressed a meeting in which he followed La Follette's idea of "calling the roll." He separated the sheep from the goats, and when some members protested as to their classification they were given scant courtesy. The meeting ended up in disorder.

"Legalized Bank Robbery"—This is the title of a book issued by Grant S. Youmans of Minot, which purports to tell the story of how he was robbed of his bank at Minot through the machinations of competitors, aided by the legal machinery of the state banking board and the state bank examiner. The volume has had a large circulation and has brought considerable adverse comment upon the banking system of the state that permits or gives its officers power to wreck banks at will. This comment has come from outside the state and has had a very bad effect. In order that this matter may be cleared up and the officials concerned freed from the discredit that this publication puts upon them a resolution is before the legislature asking for a committee to investigate the whole matter, the committee being given power to subpoena witnesses and to call for and examine all the records of the bank examiner, the banking board and the defunct bank. Such a committee, undoubtedly will be appointed and the report to the legislature may be expected to set at rest a few of the false impressions that the book has given to the public with regard to state officers.

Printing Plants—Not satisfied with having the state own its own printing plant and run it Representative Williams of Bismarck would also have the state run its own newspaper, to be used in giving official information to the citizens, probably similar to such publications as the Saskatchewan Gazette, published by the province. But as the speaker has refused to repeal the publicity pamphlet law the state will have a sufficient printing deficit to face, without indulging in the luxury of a state newspaper plant now. Ruess has it that the plant of the Bismarck Tribune company, now in the hands of a receiver, may be offered to the state at a very low figure if Williams' bills become law.

Mothers' Day—To be in line with other states a bill has passed both houses setting "Mothers' day" as the second Sunday in May. A law passed in 1915 made this day come on the first Sunday in June, which made North Dakota's celebration of it three weeks late.

Revived—After having indefinitely postponed all proposed amendments to the constitution looking to a lengthening of the terms of state, legislative and county officers, the senate, sitting as a committee of the whole, revived three of them and placed them on general orders. They have a good chance of passage in the senate.

Enforcement Commissioner—House bill 71 would create the office of enforcement commissioner, entrusting him with the work of enforcing the prohibition law, laws against the social evil, gambling and the like. A similar law passed in 1909 was declared unconstitutional, but this bill has been carefully drawn to avoid the same fate. JOHN ANDREW.
