BIRDS SHOULD BE PROTECTED

INVESTIGATIONS SHOW THAT THEY DO A GREAT DEAL OF GOOD AND LITTLE HARM TO THE FARMER

That thrushes—the group of birds in which are included robins and bluebirds—do a great deal of good and very little harm to agriculture is the conclusion reached by investigators of the department who have carefully studied the food habits of these birds. Altogether there are in the limits of the United States 11 species of thrushes, five of which are commonly known as robins and bluebirds. The other 6 include the Townsend solitaire, the wood, the veery, the gray cheek, the olive-back, and the hermit thrushes.

The robins and bluebirds nest close to houses, and even the shiest of the other species are content with the seclusion of an acre or two of woodland or swamp. For this reason the thrushes are among the best known and most carefully protected of native American birds, and at times their numbers become so great that it is feared they will do much harm to crops and fruits.

The recent investigations of the department, however, show that there is very little ground for this fear. On the other hand, they destroy such a vast number of insects each year that it is probable that without them many crops would suffer serious damage. Of all the thrushes, the robin is probably the best known. It has been frequently accused of destroying fruits and berries, but it has now been ascertained that this only occurs in regions that are so thickly settled that there is no wild fruit upon which the robin may subsist. In some years the bird is a great pest in the olive orchards of California, but it is probable that they are driven to the orchards because of the scarcity of native berries at these times. Where a wild fruit is available, the birds seem to prefer this to the cultivated varieties.

Lie the robin, the bluebird is very domestic, but unlike the robin, it does not prey upon the cultivated product or work any injury whatsoever to the fruit grower. During the fruit season in fact, five-sixths of its food consists of insects. It seems, therefore, that the common practice of encouraging the bluebird to nest near houses by placing convenient boxes in which it may build its home is thoroughly justified.

A detailed description of the habits of the robins and blue birds is contained in Department Bulletin No. 171. Bulletin No. 280, which has just been published, takes up the habits of the six other species of the thrush group which are not quite so well known. These birds also feed principally on insects and fruits, but quite a portion of the fruit they consume is wild berries. Domestic fruits are eaten so sparingly by these species that the damage done is quite negligible.

The bird known as the Townsend solitaire is noted chiefly for its song, which is said to be at times the finest of any of the thrush family. This thrush, however, confines itself almost entirely to the mountains and gorges in the far west. The wood thrush, on the other hand, is distributed over the eastern part of the United States, and is a frequenter of open groves and bushy pastures. This thrush also is noted for its sweet song, especially in the early evening. It does not nest in gardens or orchards, however, and is seldom seen about farm buildings, so that many people who are familiar with its song would not know the bird by sight. The wood thrush consumes a number of harmful insects, such as the Colorado potato beetle and white grubs. The fruit which it eats it usually picks up from the ground instead of taking fresh from the tree. There is therefore no reason why the wood thrush should not be rigidly protected.

ANTI-WAR SLAVES WED LEGALLY

At Little Rock, Ark., a few days ago the Arkansas Supreme Court has declared the unions of negro slaves in the anti-bellum days to be legal marriages, even though no marriage ceremony was performed.

The decision was given in a case involving property which a negro had inherited from his grandfather, who was a slave. His title was attacked on the ground that his father was an illegitimate child. The Court held that though the grandparents of the negro in the present case never went through a marriage ceremony they were legally married according to the customs of their time.

HIS PROMISE VIOLATES LAW

NORTH DAKOTA JUDGE OUSTED FROM OFFICE FOR PLEDGING TO TURN BACK PART OF HIS SALARY.

Last Thursday at Bismarck the North Dakota Supreme Court upheld the verdict of the Bowman district court by which Edward P. Totten was prevented from taking the office of the county judge to which he was elected because of a pre-election statement to voters of the county he made the declaration that he would turn part of his salary back to the county.

This pledge the supreme court holds violated the corrupt practice act. Frisby E. Diehl contested the election.

GIRLS! DRAW A MOIST CLOTH THROUGH HAIR DOUBLE ITS BEAUTY

Try this!.. Hair Gets thick, glossy, wavy and beautiful at once.

Immediately? Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few week's use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

HOW THE "F-4" WAS RAISED

After five months of practically continuous work under extremely trying conditions, the submarine "F-4" which with a crew of 22 men on board had failed to rise following a dive in water 300 feet deep outside the harbor of Honolulu, was raised to the surface and on Aug. 10 was placed in drydock. The raising of this vessel is by far the most remarkable feat in ship raising ever accomplished, says the November Popular Mechanics Magazine. After the vessel had been docked, an examination showed two large holes, one at the bow and the other at the stern, while the bottom and starboard were found to be filled with sand, mud and battery plates and other debris. At that time no definite cause for the disaster to the vessel could be discovered. There were indications, however, that the crew had been asphyxiated by chlorine gas generated by the leakage of sea water into the cells of the storage batteries, and that the holes in the hull had been caused after the death of the crew, by the pounding of the vessel on the sea bottom. A view of the submarine after being raised and placed in drydock accompanies the article, which fully describes the difficulties encountered in the work and the means employed to overcome them.

THE LIFE EXPRESS.

If an interesting journey you should care some time to take, A journey that would be worth while, And one you'd care to make
Just board the rapid Life Express; Get on at Boyhood, And travel over hill and dale, And through Achievement Wood.
The road through Childhood swiftly runs; The station next is Youth; Beyond that step is Middle Age, Deep in the Vale of Truth; Old Age is reached on schedule time—It takes away one's breath To speed so swiftly toward the end—The terminus is Death.
The track grows rougher toward the end; 'Tis then that you gaze back And count the milestones gray that mark The fast receding track.
At last the grim conductor calls— No need for calling twice; "Far as we go. Step lively, please; Change cars for Paradise."

LIFE AND LONGEVITY.

Simply Prolonging One's Days on Earth Is Not Real Living.

What really constitutes life? Is it action, or is it merely existence? Who is the more useful, the man who gives his all in energy to service or he who conserves his forces and thereby prolongs his days? He lives most who accomplishes most. Activity in useful, productive or constructive effort is the real test of life. Length of years may content some, but restless, energetic souls will press forward, regardless of time, striving for a goal they may never attain, but always striving, and these only really live.

Life insurance presidents, being interested in the prolongation of existence, bend their efforts to the teaching of elements of living, the avoidance of excesses, exposures or unnecessary risks of any kind and in this way really serve the world because they increase the productive years of man.
As a result of modern methods man really lives longer and better, but this is not the all in all of life. To live is to be active, to have a part in the creative effort of mankind, regardless of whether the span be long or short, so long as it is busy, for "an end is an end, whether it cometh on the winged heels of a week or the dull stretch of a century."—Omaha Bee.

STRUGGLES OF AN ARTIST.

Story of the Peasant Painter Millet and "The Angelus."

It was only after long years of struggle and dire poverty, through which Millet was consoled and supported by his wife, that the peasant painter was able to take the three roomed cottage at Barbizon and "try to do something really good."

It was then that he began to paint that most beautiful poem of poverty, "The Angelus," which is today one of the most valuable pictures in the world. Again and again he threw aside the picture in despair of ever finishing it to his satisfaction, and as often his wife replaced it on the easel and induced him to continue.

On one occasion he was so incensed at not being able to produce a certain effect that he seized a knife and would have destroyed the canvas and ended the matter once for all had not his wife fortunately seized his hand and induced him to give the picture another trial.
Thus it was that at last "The Angelus" found a place on the walls of the Louvre. The success it won encouraged Millet to paint many more pictures and thus place himself among the immortals in art.

A Sign of Rain.

An east side girl says she has come upon an infallible weather indicator. She can tell if it is going to rain without even glancing at the sky or casting her eyes over the weather forecasts in the daily papers. And it's the simplest thing in the world—just the disappearance of all umbrellas in sight.
"Umbrellas are perfectly safe in our office up to twenty-four hours before a storm," said she, explaining. "You can leave them anywhere. Even the pearl and gold handled ones are immune from abstraction. Indeed, one can hardly chase them away. So if I want to know the weather for a day ahead I must glance at the umbrella racks. If I find them becoming empty I make a bet line for the best rain shade of those that are left and make all other necessary plans for rain."
Columbus Dispatch.

Scene Painting.

In the past half century and more, especially since the improvement of the electric light, scene painting has become very elaborate and very expensive. Instead of being kept in its proper place as the decoration of the drama, as a beautiful accessory of the action, it has often been pushed to the front, so as to attract attention to itself and thereby to distract attention from the play which it was supposed to illuminate. Shakespeare has been smothered in scenery, and the art of the actor has been subordinated to the art of the scene painter.—Brander Matthews in Scribner's Magazine.

Phonetic Spelling.

Phonetic spelling was evidently in fashion in the sixteenth century, when even Shakespeare could not spell his own name consistently. There is a letter dug from the correspondence of a lady of the sixteenth century in the book of the "Cotsword Family"—the Hicks-Beaches. Juliana writes—it is a matter of debt between the cautious widow and "My lord a Kaldor"—"My lord Ammari and your wife I honour and love, but your false swearing and promise I boterle a pore." What she really meant was "utterly abhor."—London Telegraph.

Fifty-fifty.

"Jinks gives his wife half his salary every week."
"And what becomes of the other half?"
"She still has to get that in the old way—out of the pockets of his trousers."—Richmond Times Dispatch.

Quite a Difference.

"Did I understand you to say the woman Dubbins married is well off?"
"No she was."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Uncomfortable Part.

"Has Brown a comfortable income?"
"Large, but not comfortable! His wife knows just how much it is."—Puck.

It is an abominable thing for a man to commend himself.—Sterne.
