Making Both Ends Meet

The consumer pays too much for food, the farmer receives too little. Between them is a gulf of wasteful distribution methods and speculation. The problem of bridging it faces alike producer and consumer, says

The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

The farmer has been doing his best with cooperative shipping and marketing; now the consumer at his end is forming direct cooperative buying associations.

In a coming issue of THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN James E. Collier tells the story of a league of New York restaurant keepers who aim to buy farm produce cooperatively, direct from the farm. They say it's the only way they can make both ends meet these days. Farmers in every branch of the industry have about reached the conclusion that only through close cooperative methods can they bridge the gap between producer and consumer and make both ends meet. In the 52 big weekly issues of THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN that I will order sent to you for just $1.00 you'll get all the news of organized buying and selling, business sound guidance on every farm problem, and entertainment galore.
