GHOSTS of Yesterday... seems to be an appropriate title for a photograph that is to be 'revived' on the 'shadow screen'.

It is possible, by the way, that film evangelists are using the 'revival' method of stilling objections to Sunday shows.

They still a string to the fan's biggest system that does not include money for the movies.

Cupid seems to be promoting a film extension movement through film titles. One says: "You Can't Kill Love," and another declares, "Love Never Dies." We shall see.

The Sure Cure
Actor in New York, betrayed to the law by his troupe of three wives, says:

"If a girl likes you too well, marry her."

Film censors put "The Burden of Proof" on the screen.

One photograph, giving up in advance, pleads, "I Am Guilty."

Eugene O'Brien, the Selmaick star, opines that some people are finding times hard only in comparison to when they were soft.

Oddly enough, nobody has yet blamed the movies for the tidal wave of bigamy that is just now sweeping the sea of matrimony.

It has taken "Get-Rich Quick" Wallingford" a long time to find, in moving pictures, a field for his operations.

Side Glances at Films
"Buried Treasure" is not based on Bergdoll's sunken pot of gold. Mary Pickford now finds it necessary to come to the movies "Through the Back Door."

William Faversham does not consider signing a picture contract as "The Sin That Was His." "Home Talent" having tried play-acting and minstrel shows is now going into pictures.

Material Facts LUMBER YARD CHAT

We don't want to unduly urge you to buy building materials. Neither do we wish to go round your premises with note book in hand, prescribing a new chicken house here or a new corn crib there. That is your business when you are ready for it. Our end of the deal is to provide the stock and have it ready for your inspection and use, when you need it. We are there with right goods and right prices. We invite you to examine our material.

Don't forget whitewash when you are ready to brighten up the horse stalls and hog houses. Our hydrated lime makes an excellent whitewash.

The Buffalo did not perish from storm and cold. He was amply protected by a shaggy coat of hair. Our Keystone Hair Insulator is a real protection against cold when used in the walls of a house. The frost cannot creep in when this nature-like insulation is applied back of the plastering and around window and door frames. It will pay you to look it up and decide on using Keystone for best results.

Our idea of a square deal is that it goes all the way round.

You can call our Yard a Depot for Building Materials. Just stop and think what our stock contains. Lumber, though the largest, is only one item. Look over the list. Cement, Plaster, Paper, Screens, Cedar Posts, Building Tile, Ladders, Asphalt Shingles, Wall Board, Maple Flooring, Clear Oak Dimension, Gravel, Brick, Moulding, Windows, Doors, Roofing, Flaxinum, Wide Redwood, Wagon Box Bottoms, Millwork and a dozen more.
