The Drayton high schools is in a high state of efficiency, and probably on the whole averages a little higher than any other school in the county in advancement, which, by the way, is no small compliment to Drayton, because we mean no detraction to the many other graded schools in the county. Pembina county leads in the number of graded schools in the state, and they are all doing excellent work.

Died.

DEMARSE—At Carlisle, June 7th, 1896, Cella Demarse, aged 10 years.

CAVILEER—At St. Paul, Minn., Saturday, June 6th, 1896, William McM. Cavileer, of abscess of the brain, aged 35 years, 3 months, and 26 days.

Mr. Cavileer was the second son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cavileer of this city. He went to St. Paul a few weeks ago to get medical attention, and entered the hospital there. An operation was performed and at first it was hoped that he would recover. A week before his death however, a telegram announced his serious condition and Mrs. Cavileer went to St. Paul, to attend to him and remained with him until his death. The remains arrived here on Sunday, and Monday afternoon the funeral services conducted by Rev. R. Johnston, were attended at the Presbyterian church by a very large congregation of sympathizing friends. Mr. Cavileer was unmarried and leaves besides his parents, two brothers and a sister. The Great Wallace Show.

The Rocky Mountain News, of Denver, of June 14th, has this to say of the show that will be in Pembina on July 15th:

The Great Wallace Shows closed a two-day's engagement in Denver last night before an audience of 6,000. It was the first performance given here that was not interfered with by inclement weather, and the people filled the big tent. The applause was frequent and vigorous, and the people were evidently well pleased. This show, now among the biggest on the road, has, in its stay in this city, made a name and established a reputation second to none, which justifies it in a return at any time. It has a large and well selected menagerie, and its performance includes the three rings, which are kept going all the time, and in which the speed contests are real races. The performance is two hours and a quarter in length, the longest given by any show on the road. It is a well-balanced performance throughout, and not made top-heavy with a few features and a great deal of fill-in matter. The brags, of which there are 300, are of the best. The show left at midnight for Leadville, where it exhibits tomorrow, its cars being handled in four sections. It is en route to the East.

MUSHROOMS AND TOADSTOOLS.

Rules by Which Food Can Be Distinguished From Poison.

The common mushroom never grows in the woods. Remembering this, the collector will not eat supposed mushrooms found in the woods, and may thus save his family the unpleasant necessity of a coroner's inquest. The gills of the common mushroom are pink or dark-brownish purple, but can be distinguished only by accurate knowledge of their individual appearance. A large genus, the lactarius, is known by its exuding milk when the stems or caps are broken. Many of the species are esculent. None of them is poisonous, several of them are large, white and showy; with two exceptions, they grow from the ground, and are found in the woods in large quantities. On tasting, one is disposed to think that spontaneous combustion has occurred in the mouth, but it loses its fiery qualities on cooking, and, though it is a coarse species, is much more tender and savory than many of the vegetables we eat.

Have let me say that, in cooking all varieties of toadstools they should be cooked precisely as is the oyster. The time of cooking should be determined by the consistency of the variety. Salt, pepper and butter are the only necessities as seasoning, and the aim should be to preserve, as nearly as possible, the natural flavor. It is culinary heresy to soak them with gravies or smother them with foreign flavors.—Charles McIlvaine, in Philadelphia Bulletin.

EIGHT MEN SHARED ONE OYSTER.

It Weighed Eighty-two Pounds and Was Two Feet Long.

An extraordinary oyster shell is owned by a Portland man. It is almost two feet in length and one and a half feet in width. The shell is very rough on the outside, and white and smooth and beautiful on the inside. It is at least three inches thick in the central portion and is very massive and heavy. It tips the scales at thirty-seven pounds. Of course the two halves of the shells would weigh at least twice that, or seventy-four pounds. These huge oyster shells were brought to Portland in the five-masted schooner Gov. Ames, on the occasion of her last visit here some years ago. The oyster was secured alive in Japan and made a stew that was more than enough for eight men. The whole oyster, when alive, weighed eighty-two pounds. Leaving out the seventy-four pounds for the shell, and there are eight pounds that the oyster itself must have weighed.—Springfield Union.

Holstein Crossbreeds.

The cross between the pure Holstein and Jersey cow is generally a mongrel, or mixed in an utter confusion of colors, and woolly to a great degree. The eye and deer-like head of the Jersey can be detected at times, while the form is smoother, more plump and less bony than either the Holstein or Jersey, and the size is between the two. The first cross between the Holstein and common stock is uniformly black and white, while about one-sixth of the second cross goes back in color to the dam of the first cross, and the crosses thereafter prove true to the Holsteins in color. These animals are of good size for the shambles, and also produce about twice as much milk as Jersey grades and of equal quality. The Holstein seems to be the only breed that will produce such valuable crossbreeds.—G. R. Sneath in Orange Judd Farmer.

An Ill-Assorted Marriage.

The allusion to May and December, in describing marriages between youth and age has been used so much that it has become trite. But if there ever was a case in which the expression could be properly applied, it was one that occurred in Richmond, Va., a short time ago. The singular feature of the case is that the groom impersonated May, the bride assuming the role of December. The former was Hiram D. Ely, fifteen years old, and the latter Mrs. Jane D. Ely, his sister-in-law, a widow on the shabby side of fifty and the mother of four children. Both were from the country, and as the boy produced a permit from his mother to marry, a license was granted, and the strangely mismatched couple were married. They were accompanied on their wedding tour by the four children.—Troy Times.

Horse Breeding.

The tide has turned for horse breeding, as the supply of good horses is now exhausted for our growing cities, and the foreign trade that has so rapidly developed takes ship loads every week. We have at last come to realize the importance of breeding to suit the order of things, leaving out small scrub horses and speed. Except the few professional breeders of phenomenal speed, we have to face the new market demand for heavy draft and stylish, handsome coaches at the high prices ruling in the European markets for big class horses.

A Test of Vanity.

Lady (applying the test)—Achl what a pity! The handsomest gentleman in the company has got a splash on his waistcoat!

All the gentlemen present look down in consternation at their vests.—Westfaliches Volksblatt.

Not to Be Seen.

"Ah," he whispered, "I will print a kiss upon your lips."
"She started frightfully."
"Heaven's!" she cried, with a gesture of deprecation. "Somebody would be sure to read my face!"—Detroit Tribune.

Grim Humor.

An undertaker in Leipzig, who eked out the profits of his trade by letting apartments, hung up a notice board over a coffin in his show window, with the inscription: "Lodgings for single gentlemen."—Lokalanzeiger.

Mr. Peduncle's Reason.

Maud—Miss Millsap is so very plain! But she sings well.
Irene—Poor girl! She never can understand why it is that when young Mr. Peduncle comes to see her he turns down the light and then asks her to sing.—St. Louis Republic.
