Notice to Creditors.

In the matter of the estate of Harry J. Skinner, deceased:

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, E. W. Conny, administrator of the estate of Harry J. Skinner, late of the city of Minneapolis, county of Hennepin and state of Minnesota, deceased, to the creditors of and all persons having claims against said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to said administrator at his residence in the city of Pembina, county of Pembina and state of North Dakota. Dated February 10th 1914.

PEMBINA Loan and Savings Association.

Loans money on good Pembina County real estate. Every borrower is a shareholder and participates in the profits the same as the investor. Every dollar paid in part of the debt and is also placed at interest for the benefit of the shareholders. From experience it is found that from 10 to 15 monthly payments pays the principal and interest on any sum borrowed. Monthly payments are 50 cents per share and $1 per hundred of sum borrowed. No bonus. In form of borrowing money is especially convenient and profitable to wage earners and salaried men who want to own their own homes. The monthly payments are less than rent, and this for "rent" buys the home.

AMERICAN VILLAGES.

Here is a Writer Who Claims They Are Positively Hideous.

No distinctively American style has arisen, and the average American home remains as ugly and as undistinguished as a Zulu kraal. In its essence it is simply a square box. And from that archetype it proceeds upward, not through degrees of beauty, but through degrees of hideousness. The more it is plastered with ornament the more vulgar and forbidding it becomes. The more it is adorned with color the more that color becomes a madness, a debauch, a public indecency.

Take a train ride through any American state and you will be sickened by the chaotic ugliness of the flitting villages—houses sprawling and shapeless, a huge advertising sign upon every flat wall, an intolerable effect of carelessness, ignorance, squalor, bad taste and downright viciousness.

But make the same sort of journey through France or Germany—say from Bremen to Munich or from Paris to Lyons—or through Austria or Italy or Switzerland, and you will be charmed by the beautiful harmony visible on all sides, the subordination of details to general effects, the instinctive feeling for color, the sound grouping, the constant presence of a tradition and a style.

The design of the peasant houses changes twenty times between the Westphalian plain and the foothills of the Alps, but in every change there is a subtle reflection of the physical environment, an unmistakable expression of human aspiration, worldly-ly and character.

I don't know any ugly village between Bremen and Munich, nor even a village without its distinction, its special beauty, its individual charm. But I don't know of a village between Washington and Chicago that is not frankly appalling.—Suart Set.

NAMED IT RAVENNA.

Just When the Ohio Town Was Going to Be Called Tappan.

Shortly after the Revolution Benjamin Tappan, son of a wealthy Boston merchant and the original owner of what is now Portage county, O., entered his father's tract in the west and spent the winter there. Other settlers joined him, and a settlement was begun, which had the dignity of a town at a time when a single log cabin at each place marked the present sites of the cities of Cleveland and Buffalo.

The place was one of singular natural beauty, and the question of a name soon arose. Now, it happened that at this time a younger brother of Benjamin Tappan's and his wife were in Italy and came upon the old town of Ravenna. Delighted with the place, the young bride expressed to her husband the wish that somewhere in the new world there might arise a town worthy to bear the name of the wonderful old Italian city.

The husband immediately thought of his brother in the Ohio wilds and at once dispatched a letter in which he pictured the beauties of the Italian city and expressed the wish that the town then arising in the wilderness be named in its honor.

Many months later Benjamin Tappan, despairing of finding a suitable name for the town, was about to yield to the wishes of his neighbors and bestow the name of Tappan upon it when the letter arrived. So, instead of Tappan, the town was named Ravenna, which name it still proudly bears.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Two Meal Animal.

Breakfast with bacon (or meat) is a latter day invention, it should be recalled. Down to almost modern times man was a two meal a day animal—dinner and supper. A fifteenth century proverb bade him rise at 5 a. m., dine at 9 a. m., sup at 5 p. m., go to bed at 9 p. m., "and thou shalt be ninety and nine." The Oxford Dictionary, indeed, gives 1463 as the date of the first mention of "breakfast." For centuries afterward it meant only the morning draft of ale, with or without a bite of bread. Everybody then set about his work fasting.—London Spectator.

An Interesting Exhibit.

If two great shops could stand side by side on the main street of the world and all the vices could be put in the show window of one of them and all the virtues in the show window of the other and all the people could go by all day, all night, and see the windowful of virtues as they were and the windowful of vices as they were all the world would be good in the morning.—Gerald Stanley Lee's "Crowds."

Not in His Line.

"They tell me," said the new reporter, who was doing an interview, "that you have succeeded in forging your way to the front."
"Sir," replied the self made man coldly, "you have been misinformed. I'm no forger."—London Globe.

Passive.

"So you lost your money in the stock market?"
"No," replied Mr. Lambkin; "I didn't even have the fun of losing it myself. I took another man's tip and then allowed a broker play it for me."—Washington Star.

All Settled.

"Have you asked your father's consent to marry that young man?"
"More than that. Mother and I have dared him to refuse."—Detroit Free Press.

No great characters are formed in this world without suffering and self denial.—Matthew Henry.
