The threshing rigs have about finished threshing the golden grain, and most of the engines are at work turning over the soil preparatory for next season's crop, and acetylene head lights and regular exhausts can be seen and heard at almost any time of the night.

The fine weather of the first of the week practically finished the threshing, and now the farmers are all busy plowing, which is rather behind the whole. While it may freeze up at anytime now, still have a right to expect about ten days or two weeks of plow weather yet.

"The Girl from Montana" played to a fair house Thursday evening. The show was good and deserved a better house than they had. But in these times of "movies" it is hard to draw a crowd by travelling troupes no matter how superior they are to these smaller shows. Times change and the days of the average travelling show are numbered, it makes no difference how good a show they put on the stage. Actors, better appear before the lime light of the "movies."

The 27th Battalion to which Roger Baska belongs and the 10th in which Tom Kitchen's brother enlisted were both under fire in recent engagements in France as shown by a few names in the casualty lists published in the Free Press. It was rumored at first that the 27th had been very badly cut up but the casualty list shows this not to be true. Mr. Kitchen received a letter from his brother this week who gave some details as to trench life.

Four hundred dogs brought from Alaska were in Winnipeg this week, on their way to Europe where they will be used as assistants in the armies. Also that while they are all a mixture of bloods that the best sledging dog is a mixture of Irish setter and the wolf dog of the Arctic.

Youmans, who has been running a threshing rig in the Joliette neighborhood this fall left yesterday via auto for his home twelve miles from Duluth, where he has a ten acre tract and a comfortable home—all he wants is a wife to preside over the home, which lacks but little of being part of the suburbs of the metropolis at the head of the lake, but "Marsh" as he is familiarly known, never bothered himself looking for one and he considers himself as happy alone. Mr. Youmans expected to find his garden destroyed by the deer and moose which are daily visitors at his place during the summer months.
