"Who?" asked the teacher, hurrying to the window and looking for—she knew not what.
"The measles! Bessy Tubbs, right on your corner, has just got them, and now it'll be my turn next!"—New York Times.

Bavarian Colony in Greece.
In Greece there is at least one tiny German oasis as a set-off to the Kaiser's 30,000 Greek guests now being fed in Bavaria. A few miles north of Athens is a village with a churchyard upon whose tombstone German names alone appear. The village has been the home for 80 years of a colony of Bavarians brought to Greece by King Otho. The villagers have the fair hair and the blue eyes of Bavaria, and although very few now speak their grandmothers' tongue, service is performed in the old church according to the Roman ritual.

American Ideals May Prove to Be Cure for Disease Affecting Rest of World

By NEWTON D. BAKER, Secretary of War

The integration of people has taken place to such an extent that really what we do is felt in parts of the world widely separated from us, and, indeed, I may say, in all parts of the world, and so we are deeply interested in the making of peace in Europe, and we ought, I think, here in America, to begin now to cultivate the thought of an amplification of our national ideals of the subject of peace in order that when that peace comes to be made, as the one great neutral nation, unengaged in the present controversy, friend to all those in the controversy, the concerted, consolidated influence of America as a nation can be brought to bear to insure that the new peace will not be a peace of an artificial kind; that it will pay less attention to princes and kings and emperors than it will to the fate of peoples, and that we will try to impress upon Europe the excellence of our own experiment of allowing to people liberty of conscience, liberty of minds, liberty of speech, and allowing them in some degree to choose the associations which go to make up the nationalities of which they are a part, in order that they may preserve the balance of power in Europe, not by artificial boundaries and among potentates and princes, but by the contentment of the people who live in the several nations with their own sovereignty, their own territory, and the justice of the conditions under which they live.

That is what has happened to our ideals. The ideals of the pilgrim fathers and of Plymouth Rock are still alive and vigorous, and potential among us; they have covered an ampler and more intricate civilization, and brought about a consolidated nation here, a nation devoted to freedom and to justice among ourselves.

Now, this great American national idea of ours may, if we but adhere to it with enough firmness and belief, be a medicine for the disease which has affected the rest of the civilized world, and by our example and our influence, and our honest heart, we will show our help, employ it to their own comfort, thus elevating the opportunity and the plane of America everywhere, and making America in its gift to the rest of the world quite worth while apart from the satisfaction and happiness which she has derived from herself pursuing these ideals.

Training of Adults Above School Age Educational Field That Is Neglected

By SIDNEY EDWARD MEZES
President of the College of the City of New York

In New York city and in the country generally, too little attention has been given to adult education. Without relinquishing its work in the general field of academic training, the College of the City of New York will devote itself increasingly to the education of adults who are not what is usually considered of school age. I believe that there is a greater per capita return for efforts spent in educating persons who wake up to the need for intellectual training after school age than there is even in the education of young men who are sent by their parents to college.

After all, the college training is often very much like a "shotgun prescription." When a doctor doesn't know what is the matter with his patient, he may give him a prescription made up of a great number of ingredients, in the hope that possibly one of them will do some good. It is difficult to tell just what a young college student should receive, but we give him the best shotgun prescription we can advise, and the result is, as a rule, surprisingly good.

With the adult, on the other hand, we have a chance for a rifle shot. Such a person knows more definitely what he wants, and we are able to give it to him. Of course the college is concerned with the specific needs of adults who want further training in so far as that training is in the collegiate rather than in the primary or secondary field. There are other agencies in the public-school system prepared to provide education below collegiate level.

Next Twenty Years to See a Frenzied Development of Aerial Transportation

By COL. GEORGE O. SQUIER
Head of Aviation Section of United States Army

The study of the air is in its infancy. I look for a period of frenzied development during the next twenty years.

Aerial mail service is the next logical step in the internal development of this government. We have already discovered that it is possible to save two hours by sending aeroplanes out to meet incoming ships, and rushing the mails to seaport and inland towns.

I cannot say between what points these aerial routes will be established. Personally I think that one of the first will be between Philadelphia and New York. These cities are two points between which quick service is needed. The next step will be the establishment of passenger aerial service, while the final step in the conquest of the air will be the utilization of aeroplanes for transportation of tonnage.

Few Men Kill Themselves by Overwork; Many More are Destroyed by Underwork

By GOVERNOR E. L. PHILIPP of Wisconsin

Every young man is the maker of his own future. He must be able to stand up and walk alone if he wants to be a success. Speak the truth. Make it a matter of habit. The world hates a liar, and respects a man only when it knows his word is good. Be honest. Be unselfishly honest, and not alone in money matters. Then people will learn to trust you, and some day the man will come along who will put you on the road to prosperity. Ability is necessary. Make yourself a master of what you do. Be willing to undertake anything and then carry it through. Don't be afraid you will kill yourself working. It may have happened that a few fellows worked themselves to death, but more men are destroyed by underwork than overwork.

Both Costly and Stately

Two Elements That Mark the New Fashions That Come From Paris.

DAY OF THE TALL WOMAN

She Is No Longer Compelled to Wear the Extremely Abbreviated Skirt of the Last Three Years— Evening Gowns Have Dignity.

New York.—Any observant person glancing over the masses of women gathered in the large centers would not say that there was any lack of new autumn dressing. Hundreds of new gowns were worn, and winter hats made their appearance in mid-September, but the burden of the dressmakers' plaint was that these models were, as a rule, bought from the shops at reasonable prices and that the expensive gowns which cost them such an amazing sum of money were neglected.

The early autumn was perplexing in regard to fashions. No expert who saw behind the scenes can deny it. If America had not been peculiarly prosperous, but the stock market had not been turning men into millionaires with a rapidity that took the breath away, the situation would have been tragic to the importers.

You see, the prices in Paris have never reached such a height in the history of women's clothes. That's a big statement, but on reading the itemized bills that were made by the women of Europe during the first and operated on these days, and I'm always keeping myself in condition for it."

The day of the flapper will never be over, for all the world loves youth, and to be young and to look young will be the whip over every woman until another race of being follows this one. But as much as is spoken on this subject, there are thousands of women who prefer to be stately than absurd and who have found the last three years excessively difficult for them, willy-nilly, upon even the strong-minded women who had resolved to look dignified at the expense of fashion.

Adapted Themselves to Fashion.
Short skirts in the evening were comfortable because dancing was the universal recreation, but when short skirts left the length demanded by the fox trot and almost reached the length demanded by the ballet, it was necessary to do something strange in the way of a new fashion.

America produced an entire race of women to meet these new gowns, it would seem, for the tall, Anglo-Saxon type has felt like a giant among Lilliputians, like a well-clothed woman against a native Hawaiian. In the clothes which she selected. Where all the little women came from, gracious knows, and how they all reduced themselves to the consistency of planked shads and the sinuosity of French eels, is a matter for the student of the human race, and not the student of dress.

The first feature of the new fashions that causes the smile on the tall woman's face, is the introduction of the train. She is quite aware that

On the left is a black panne velvet made by Worth, which hangs in a straight line from bust to ankles, and is made gorgeous by a deep, unfitted girde of rhinestones arranged in lattice work and edged at the top with a narrow band of small pink roses. A suggestion of the First Empire is given in the Napoleonic wreaths of pink roses on the skirt, with the dripping tassels of crystals.
On the right is an early Italian gown by Bernard called Madonna. It is as straight as a mummy case and is made of metal gauze over green chiffon. The huge flowers are of stamped silver. The deep girde placed below the waistline is of jet beads, and there is a deep necklace made from a jet rope, which forms the shoulder strap.

second empire, and also before the French revolution under the reigns of Louis XV and Louis XVI, it is quite possible that the statement can stand without argument.

Cite Higher Cost of Materials.
France excused herself on the plea that the material was so costly to produce that the designers had to put out an immense amount of capital to secure the right fabrics to create gowns that the Americans would buy. She insists that she did not make more than her usual percentage out of the more than two thousand models which she offered to the American public in August.

If you wonder why half the matrons in the country are smiling as they come out of the dressmaking places and shops, it is because their day in dress has come. We will now be stately in the evening.

This does not mean that one shall instantly relax vigilance over the flesh. Double chins, a pad at the back of the neck, rounded hips and a thickened diaphragm, are no more desirable now than they were six months ago.

The doctors have made so much of this fight against flesh, approving of it in its moderate form and urging it upon every woman in the name of health, that it is not probable that we shall let the figure grow old merely because the fashions have changed.

There are so many reasons for keeping slim these days that every woman is provided with a good one. It may be the mere feminine desire to be fashionable, or it may be the extreme reason advanced by one woman at a dinner the other night, who said: "The doctors say that it is necessary to keep slim because, if one is operated on, the less fat the knife has to go through, the better."

To the shocked inquiry of the other woman as to whether she expected an immediate operation, she said: "Oh, no; I have nothing the matter with me as far as I know, but everyone is this appendage, as Callot uses it, does not increase her dignity; it heightens her absurdity if she allows herself to wear it in its original form.

The Callot evening gowns are drawn so high in the front that more than half of the leg shows against a background formed by the train. This trick is too theatrical for any woman except one employed in a chorus that brings out a fantastic sartorial effect.

Not for American Woman.
Callot does not intend it to be worn by the American woman. She has tried this skirt for season after season and it is always filled in with a founce of lace, tulle or metal.

With the exception of a few eccentricities, all the evening gowns present a stately effect and give a vivid impression of dignity. They hang in straight lines down the figure, it is true, and have not a regulation waistline, but the absence of frivolity and the presence of ecclesiastical needlework, touch up each frock with a ceremonial aspect.

Infrequently, in the new evening gowns, one sees a way of escape from needlework for the woman who does not wish to adopt it. Its expense is against it, where the majority of women are concerned. It is not possible to get this kind of needlework cheaply done, and all manner of bullion threads and colored crystals have advanced in price. The dressmakers are already substituting cheaper trifles for these costly ones, as in the first place, few women will pay the original price, and in the second place, it is difficult to get the material and workmanship in this country.

However, for the satisfaction of those who like the conservative rather than the new, there is the truth starting one pleasantly in the face that velvet, satin and silk net are reckoned among the first factors in a brilliant evening gown.

HELP FOR WORKING WOMEN

Some Have to Keep on Until They Almost Drop. How Mrs. Conley Got Help.

Here is a letter from a woman who had to work, but was too weak and suffered too much to continue. How she regained health—

Frankfort, Ky.—"I suffered so much with female weakness that I could not do my own work, had to hire it done. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I tried it. I took three bottles and I found it to be all you claim. Now I feel as well as ever I did and am able to do all my own work again. I recommend it to any woman suffering from female weakness. You may publish my letter if you wish."—Mrs. JAMES CONLEY, 516 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice.—It will be confidential.

Nerves All On Edge?

Just as nerve wear is a cause of kidney weakness, so is kidney trouble a cause of nervousness. Anyone who has backache, nervousness, "blues," headaches, dizzy spells, urinary ills and a tired, worn feeling, would do well to try Doan's Kidney Pills. This safe, reliable remedy is recommended by thousands who have had relief from just such troubles.

A North Dakota Case

Mrs. Eva May Franklin, 1320 Front St., Fargo, N. D., says: "My kidneys troubled me and my back ached intensely. I had headaches, tired easily and was weak. The action of my kidneys was irregular too. Doan's Kidney Pills not only strengthened my kidneys and cured the backache, but made me feel much stronger. I haven't had a sign of kidney trouble since."
