HOPE IS SEEN OF PACT ADOPTION

Republicans Relying On Break Among Democrats To Secure Needed Votes.

34 VOTES ARE NEEDED

Assertions is Made That 22 Democrats Are Ready To Quit Wilson Lead and Take Reservation Program As It is.

Washington.—Possibilities of a substantial break in the Democratic Peace treaty ranks in the Senate impelled influential Democratic senators to move for a caucus to discuss a possible change in party policy, and revived the hopes of the Republicans that the treaty might yet be ratified with the Republican reservations adopted at the last session of Congress.

On the Republican side it was asserted that the 22 Democrats, only a few short of the number required to insure ratification, had signified a willingness to quit the lead of President Wilson and take the Republican reservation program as it is.

Disatisfaction May Be Bared. The movement for a Democratic caucus may bring into the open the dissatisfaction that has smoldered in some Democratic quarters since the President sent his letter to the caucus of November 19, asking that the senators of his party vote against ratification on the basis of the Republican reservations.

The seven senators who disregarded his advice have been active constantly in their effort to dissuade others from the stand then taken.

But among both Democrats and Republicans it is realized that the endeavor to break down Democratic resistance still has a long way to go if it is to succeed. Sixty-four votes are required to ratify the treaty, and although 34 Republicans voted for ratification in November, the party leaders are sure now of the support of only 30. That leaves 34 to be delivered by the Democrats.

In the belief that time is fighting on their side, the plan of the Republican leaders is to first clear away collateral issues of the treaty disagreement when the subject comes again before the Senate. The next reservation to be considered in the revision being undertaken on the Senate floor is the troublesome qualification of Article 10.

Caucus May Develop Strength. Meantime, it is pointed out, a Democratic caucus may have developed the real strength of the movement among Democratic senators to break away from a policy of resistance and put the treaty through. Should a majority of the 47 Democrats vote in the caucus to make such a move, it is expected by the Republicans that the effect would be to bring over the votes needed for ratification.
