

Stories of Success

PETER COOPER

Peter Cooper was America's first great business man and always in business he made the Golden Rule pay. The city of New York owes a deep debt of gratitude to this good man, for he gave 20 years of his life to planning and developing the Cooper Institute, a great free university designed to give poor boys an education. Peter Cooper's childhood was one of toil and endeavor. Just one year did he go to school, just one year in all his life and then for only half a day at a time.

The Cooper Institute today, on the spot where the grocery store of its founder once stood, is the most complete free school of its kind in America.

The best-egg of his afterwards great fortune was the money saved in boyhood.

It is remarkable how savings added to from time to time will accumulate.

Even Peter Cooper had to make a start.

The start is the thing. Just one dollar will open a savings account for you in this bank. Start today a good time to begin.

J. B. RICE & CO. ANDOVER, OHIO

A Sister to Jimmy

away she spread out the yellow sheet and slowly ready its contents, forming each word with her lips:

"Don't worry hunting new job nothing doing yet money later."

She passed the crackling sheet to Miss Wrigg with the curling lip of sisterly superiority.

"I'd know it was from Jeems without the signature," she commented. "Uses just his ten words and doesn't waste any of them in telling me he's all right."

And, having commented, the third assistant of the "Cruelties" suddenly laid her head upon her desk and laughed and sobbed, and wailed aloud to the rafted ceilings.

It was, of course, useless to send an answer to a telegram headed simply "Oakland"; it was an extravagance to let that useless answer exceed ten words, and foolish to be in such haste as to waste one's lunch hour finding an office; but, in spite of all these facts, at 20 minutes past 12 the elderly woman operator at the Western Union leaned out from her wire cage to caress the arm of a tall, hysterical girl who alternately sobbed and chuckled while she scrawled the two lines of her message:

"Don't worry yourself. Got job myself. Sending you a check the first."

The Women's National Game.

There is always something impressive about a crowd that is swayed by a single emotion; you get an impression of force, says Mary Heaton Vorse in Success Magazine. These women, who a few moments ago had been quiet shoppers, formed a mob. They swayed and pushed as though moved by a common impulse toward a table where were the embroideries. From their throats came a little dull growl, a curious noise—the whisper of a mob. The noise of a mob in joy or in anger or just in fright, or just its restless murmur as it waits, is different from any other noise that comes from the human throat—quite distinct, of a curious animal timbre, I heard it once on the occasion of the throwing of a bomb; again from a crowd waiting for a bank to open, and a third time in a theater when fire had been called; and now here it was in miniature from a couple of hundred women waiting to buy ten-cent embroideries. They were poor women with shawls and baskets, women with babies in their arms, women with threadbare clothes carefully brushed, who must think before spending each dime in the dollar, but for once indulging in the great sport of American women—bargain hunting.
