WANTS TO KNOW WHY
Allen O. Myers Starts to College Again.
MATRICULATED TUESDAY
Admits He Knows More Than His Teacher.

Allen O. Myers, dispenser of oratorical dynamite and a living incubator of iconoclastic utterances, at the age of 58 years, has gone back to his books and his lessons.

Graduated from the school of experience and the university of adversity, this man, known throughout the state of Ohio, as newspaper man, politician, legislator, and now farmer, feels that even at this late age there is something yet to learn.

So he has put his name down on the enrollment sheet in the agricultural college at Ohio State university.

He arrived yesterday and got quick action.

Myers has a record. He will add to it from this time on. The fact that for four years he has been around the state telling farmers how to grow the best alfalfa or the finest corn, makes little difference. He seeks more knowledge and he will get it.

"What was the last school you attended," asked the staid professor who can tell you how many kernels of wheat there are in a bushel or why a pumpkin is yellow instead of blue.

"The industrial school at Lancaster" promptly replied Myers.

For at the age of 13 Allen was a bad, bad boy. They declared him incorrigible and he put in four years learning to be good and graduated with honors. But he wasn't cured of his incorrigibility; in fact, he isn't tamed yet.

Myers loves a fight. He is an active member of the Franklin County Farmers' union and takes great pride in his 32 acres located near Worthington. The din and the roar of city life have no charm for him. The good old mooley cow, a young goat or a few acres of alfalfa cause him the greatest joy.

But the sledging may be a trifle hard for by his own confession, Myers knows more than the teacher. He will study chemistry as relating to agriculture.

"I know what to do on my farm," said Myers, "but I don't know why." So he is starting out to learn, for the "why" with is so important that had he been a resident of Kansas a few years ago he would have been a leader among the Populists.—OHIO State Journal.

SOME STRANGE EXPERIENCES

Falls to the Lot of One Fred Bartl.

LOCAL WRESTLING STAR

Does not Let Heavy Roads Interfere with Training.

Tell Story of Unusual Happening Taking Place Tuesday East of City—Match Friday Evening

The rain and mud does not interfere in the least with the daily work of Fred Bartl, who is working hard for his match Friday night with Al Akerman at the Grand Opera House.

After a six mile run over the country roads, Bartl returns to the city covered with mud from head to foot, but the heavy sledging has the desired effect, for it is exercise the local athlete is after, and he surely gets it, in packing about the extra weight of 72 pounds of country clay and mud.

"It is not half so much fun as one might imagine," said Bartl Tuesday, after his work out. "I don't mind the mud myself, but I do hate to be stopped half a dozen times each trip by some farmer, who implores me to stop for a few moments and assist him in hunting for his team which has disappeared in one of the mud holes. After diving a few times, we find the horses and drag them out to some dry spot and the tiller of the soil thanks me and goes on his way rejoicing while yours truly after clawing a few handfuls of mud from his nose, mouth, eyes and ears trots on down the pike.

"A funny thing happened Tuesday afternoon about five miles east of the city," said Bartl as a crowd began to gather about to hear one of the wrestler's famous stories. "I met the farmer sitting on the fence waiting for the mud hole to dry up, so that he could find his team and wagon. I told him it might turn cold and the lake freeze up, and it would be summer time before the horses could be released from the place. We took off our coats and waded in. After two hours of as fast and hard work as I ever enjoyed, we dragged the horses from the mire. Mr. Johnson and myself were covered with mud from head to foot, and those two horses looked as if they also had been taking a mud bath.

"We had no sooner set foot on firm ground than one of the poor exhausted animals reached out and kissed me on the forehead. The act of the dumb brute touched me greatly, and tears began to form a little stream down over my mud bespattered cheeks. I just could not help it and I threw my arms about the neck of that mare and cried good and hard. Well, we both cried and kissed each other time and time again, as the farmer stood back looking sort of disgusted and foolish like.

"Finally, I tore myself away from the embrace of the horse long enough to tell the farmer that the mare was simply showing her gratitude for the kind act I had performed in her behalf.

"Gratitude," snorted the farmer, "why young fellow, you might just as well dry your tears for you are mistaken greatly. Gratitude! Well that takes the cake. Maude is not that kind of a horse at all. She did not kiss you because of gratitude. No sir she did not, she thought you were her colt that was lost in a sink hole about two miles down the road."

"Well, it took all the wind out of my sails," said the wrestler, "and you can wager that I will never again be fooled on that one subject if I live to be a hundred years old. I will see you fellows Friday night at the Opera House. If Akerman throws me, he will do so after the hardest battle of his life. So long."

And the cleverest little wrestler in this country went up the street whistling merrily to himself as the crowd smiled, and all went over to get their seats for the match which promises to be the best ever pulled off in Marion.

The report of the treasurer showed the club in excellent condition financially and the outlook for the future encouraging.

FINE ATTRACTION

Enjoyed by Only a Fair House Tuesday Evening.

Clyde Fitch's famous play "The Woman in the Case" was cleverly produced before a fair sized audience in the Grand Opera House Tuesday night. Ruth Chester played the leading role and her acting was as well as that of Grace St. Clair was the best that has been seen on a local stage in a long while.

The play was given in four acts and each one introduced entirely new characters, new stage settings native born or of German descent, and a new theme. The production was deserving of a much larger house.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS.

The first games of the season in the Senior High School basket ball league, were played last evening in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium before an enthusiastic crowd of high school rooters. The teams showed up in fine shape and the league promises to furnish some excellent sport during the winter season.

The first game last night was played between the Monarchs, captained by Roy Rice and the Athletics, captained by Leo Fisher. After a hard struggle through two fifteen minute halves, the Monarchs captured the game by the score of 22 to 15.

The Crescent team, captained by Rodney Hume, battled with the Alerts, captained by Guthery in the second game. It resulted in an easy victory for the Crescents by the score of 14 to 6.

Physical director C. M. Douthitt refereed at both games.

The Orphans found the Independents easy last night and justified themselves with a sufficient amount of the fruits of victory by taking everything. They won three straight games and then retreated from the alleys crying for two-bit bets that they would win the league pennant.

The scores—

Doctors Admit

That They can do Nothing More for Your Stomach Than Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are Doing Every Day.

Costs Nothing to Try.

According to the expert analysis of government authorities in the United States and Great Britain, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain the exact elements provided by nature for digesting food in the healthy stomach. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have saved sufferers from stomach disorders millions of dollars by giving them, in one small 50 cent package, more relief than countless treatments by physicians would bring about at $3.00 per visit.

Perhaps you are afflicted with dyspepsia—or some kindred disease arising from a disordered digestion. It may be headaches, heartburn, palpitation, liver trouble, insomnia, nervous debility. They all have their beginning in a stomach, which does not secrete the juices or grind the food which is taken into it.

If so, we urge you to send for a free trial package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. It will cost you nothing and surely will bring us no gain unless you find, after using it, that you are benefited and feel that you need a full sized package.

There is absolutely no danger in using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Nothing is contained in them that has not been subjected to the closest scrutiny by the government officials. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest your food without demanding a careful diet. One grain of these Tablets has power to digest 3,000 grains of ordinary food. You can be sure therefore that no matter what your condition, these little tablets taken after each meal will shortly restore your stomach to its normal condition and render it capable of doing its work unassisted.

We withhold the names of hundreds who have written us voluntarily expressing their gratitude to this simple substitute for nature.
