SECRET PROVES TOO GOOD TO KEEP

Young People Announce Their Marriage.

MISS PARRATT AND MR. HETER

Were Married at Windsor, Canada, Oct. 22.

Both Bride and Groom Are Well Known in the City. They Will Reside on Uhlir Street. Mr. Heter Has Furnished a Home.

A very pleasant surprise, kept a secret for two weeks, was given to the friends of Mr. William K. Heter, and Miss Blanche Parratt, today when announcement was made by the young couple of their marriage at Windsor, Canada, on Oct. 22 last.

Mr. Heter and Miss Parratt went to Windsor quietly and were married. They then decided to keep their marriage a secret for a few weeks to surprise their friends. The secret proved too good for them to keep longer and today they told their friends of it.

The bride is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Parratt, of north Lincoln avenue. She is a high school graduate and well known in younger circles. The groom is a clerk in the Pennsylvania freight office here and a young man held in high esteem by his employers. Today both bride and groom are being showered with good wishes by their many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Heter will be at home to their friends on Uhlir avenue where the groom has provided a pretty home after Dec. 1.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY HELD IN THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE SATURDAY NIGHT

Hon. M. A. Daugherty Arraigns W. G. Harding.

ROOSEVELT GIVEN A SCORING

Crowd Was With Speakers of the Evening.

Hon. W. T. Smith Talks on Canal Graft and Reviews Record of Garfield Who Accused Governor Harmon With Defeating the Woods Bill—Campaign Closed With a Rousing Meeting.

A real old fashioned Democratic rally was the result of the call for the closing of the campaign in the Grand Opera House Saturday evening. The crowd was there, able speakers were present, bands were in evidence, live issues were for discussion and there was enthusiasm, so that nothing was lacking.

The slight drizzle of rain which set in about the time for the band to make its appearance on the streets may have kept some people at home but as it was, the streets were crowded and long before the time for the meeting to be opened, all of the best seats in the opera house were taken.

There was only one disappointment of the evening. It had been announced that Hon. Pomeroy, candidate for lieutenant governor would be present, but he failed to put in his appearance.

Hon. Fred E. Guthery was the chairman of the evening and shortly before eight o'clock he attempted to introduce the first speaker of the evening. Just as he was beginning his introductory remarks, the Prospect delegation arrived with a band of about thirty pieces and Mr. Guthery was forced to give way to the onslaught with brass horns and with drums until the crowd had been conducted to seats on the upper floors.

Garfield Recommends Harmon.

In his opening remarks, Mr. Guthery referred to the splendid record which has been made by Governor Harmon during the twenty-one months he has been governor of the state, stating that he has done more to clean up the state and bring about a just and honest administration of the affairs of the state than had been accomplished in the quarter of a century preceding. Mr. Guthery stated that Governor Harmon stands square on his record and if the honest men of Ohio believe in the things in which Governor Harmon believes, they should unhesitatingly return him to the governorship for another term. Turning his attention to Mr. Garfield, Mr. Guthery stated that Mr. Garfield believes in good government and if Mr. Garfield is honest in what he says, he should cast his ballot for the present governor of Ohio.

Daugherty Removes Gloves.

Hon. M. A. Daugherty, of Lancaster, after having been introduced to the audience launched into a fearless discussion of the questions which the voters face in the coming election. Mr. Daugherty was given the closest attention throughout the evening. The crowd was with him and he arose to the occasion with one of the most masterful as well as the most eloquent political addresses ever heard in the city. The speaker was never at a loss for a word and he chose those which most clearly conveyed the thought sought to be conveyed. In his arraignment of grafting officials he was most bitter, in his reference to the late Governor John M. Pattison he was eloquent, in his appeals for support for the kind of government which Governor Harmon has inaugurated, he was forceful, in his arguments he was convincing and with it all he sprinkled just enough of the humorous to make the hour and a half pass quickly and pleasantly.

Predicts Many Victories.

In his opening remarks Mr. Daugherty predicted that the year 1911 will see more Democratic holdings positions of honor and trust than have been seen in many years. He predicted Democratic victories in practically all of the states which are holding elections this fall. Not only is Ohio going Democratic but the wave which started in Maine is sweeping westward and will engulf many of the states which have become tired of Republican misrule. He pleaded for support for the entire Democratic state ticket and the legislative tickets in order that Governor Harmon may be given a free hand to inaugurate the reforms which he has advocated. There is no misunderstanding the position taken by the two old parties in the present fight. The lines are clearly drawn with honesty and clean government on one side and corruption and machine politics on the other. No man can serve two masters in politics any more than in religion, declared Mr. Daugherty in substance.

Mr. Daugherty reviewed recent history in political circles in Ohio, showing how that in one year sentiment was so changed that an overwhelming Republican majority was turned into a Democratic majority of about 40,000. The cause of it was that the people of the state awoke to the fact that the state was being run by a corrupt machine and that the men who had been entrusted with public office had been for years and were still grafting fortunes by using the people's money in the state treasury for their own purposes and pocketing the money earned by that money.

Recalls Taft's Akron Speech. He recalled the time when Theodore Roosevelt sent William H. Taft, then a cabinet officer, to Ohio to denounce the greatest Republican boss in this or any other state, how Taft had come to Akron and made the declaration that if he were voting in Ohio, he would cast his ballot against George B. Cox and his Cincinnati machine. Now we have the spectacle of this same William H. Taft elevated to the presidency, sending his cabinet officers to Ohio in an effort to swing votes to the man who was nominated by George B. Cox and who yields "Deference and Devotion" to that same boss whom Taft denounced only a few years ago.

Mr. Daugherty reviewed political history referring to the election of John M. Pattison, his inauguration, his commission from the people to clean up the state and establish a just government; of Pattison's death and the return of the executive head of the state to the Republican party; how that upon the first opportunity, the people of Ohio rebuked the Republicans again and gave to John M. Harmon the commission which was placed in the hands of John M. Pattison. He told of the investigation which was begun in Cincinnati which before it could be stopped unearthed thousands of dollars in graft; of George B. Cox calling in the circuit judges whom he had placed upon the bench and instructing them how they should hold in the cases which came into their court; of the injunctions which were granted and made perpetual, effectively blocking all efforts at investigation; yet to this same Cox, Warren G. Harding yields "deference and devotion" as evidenced during his recent visit to Cincinnati where he renewed his troth to the big boss.

Opposition to Harmon's Plans.

When Harmon was inaugurated, the Republican press immediately began to say that he was going to do nothing, but one day not long after he was inducted into office, there was a message sent over to the attorney general's office informing him that more than $400,000 of the public money has been concealed by dishonest officials. Governor Harmon's efforts to ferret out the grafters who had grown rich at the expense of the people of the state were met with resistance upon every corner until it was apparent that it was useless longer to fight him. Then the attorney general fell into line and is now endeavoring to assume all of the credit for what has been done in the line of graft prosecutions and civil actions for the recovery of moneys secured illegally.

Reads Some Letters.

Mr. Daugherty charged the Republicans in office with having conspired to build up a political machine for the double purpose of perpetuating the machine and benefitting by its operations. To do this, they enlisted the banks of the state through placing public at very low rates of interest. In this connection he read a letter which was sent to a prominent banker in the southern part of the state in which the banker was informed that in order to receive any of the state's money on deposit, the bank must receive the recommendation of the Republican county chairman. The letter written by Mr. Green, then cashier of the state treasury, W. G. Harding informing him of a $20,000 deposit of state money with the Marion County bank was also read in proof of the claim that the state's money was peddled out to the various banks for political gain and in an effort to perpetuate the Republican machine. As further proof of the operations of the machine Mr. Daugherty read the letter written by a canal collector, a facsimile of which appeared in Saturday evening's Mirror reciting how it was impossible to collect tolls on the canals without water in the ditches and how the collector was spending his time working for the Republican ticket while being paid by the state.

"All of these things, while they may not constitute legal larceny, they most certainly constitute moral larceny," declared the speaker and now we have the spectacle of a cabinet member from Pennsylvania coming to Ohio to tell us to vote. From Pennsylvania, the state whose capitol is a monument of graft, the stench from which is so intense that the man in the moon has to hold his nose when he passes over the state. Another man comes from Chicago, and Chicago is almost as bad as Pennsylvania.

Alliance is an Old One.

Referring to the alliance between George B. Cox and Warren G. Harding, Mr. Daugherty said it was no sudden alliance such as springs between affinites, but it was a case of "lingering sweetness, long drawn out." Here he took up Mr. Harding's address nominating George B. Cox as a delegate to the national convention and drew many laughs with his characterization of "Little Warren G. Harding, yielding deference and devotion to Big George B. Cox." In referring to that part of the address which referred to George B. Cox as the grand leader of a grand division of the Republican party, Mr. Daugherty asked what division of the party Mr. Cox is leading. Most certainly it is not the division which is composed of the large army of honest Republicans, nor is it the division which believes in temperance and the observance of law, but it is the division which includes in its ranks the bootleggers and grafters. Mr. Daugherty stated that he did not mean to suggest that Mr. Harding is a blackleg any more than he did that George B. Cox is a Puritan.

Dick Is Hidden Away.

He referred to the manner in which Senator Dick, General Dick, Charles F. Dick, Charles Dick, Charles Dick and Dick had been nominated for the United States senatorship and had then been hidden away in a garret or cellar. He stated that it was just as well for nobody wants to either see or hear him.

Mr. Daugherty then spoke of the vision in the Republican party, the Independents upon one side and the Stand Patters or Stand Stillers upon the other. He referred to the manner in which Theodore Roosevelt inaugurated in Kansas and how beautifully he stands pat in New York. "Roosevelt is a typical Jack Falstaff and Shakespeare must have looked through the centuries and seen Teddy when he brought that character into existence," declared Mr. Daugherty. Taking up national issues for a short time, Mr. Daugherty referred to the tariff plank in the last Republican platform, which like a mother Hubbard dress, covers everything and touches nothing. He showed how revision in all tariff legislation in the history of tariff tinkering by the Republicans has always been upward and not downward and how the tariff has been placed upon the necessities of life. He read different schedules in the Payne-Aldrich-Smoot law, which decreased the duty on articles used by the rich and increased the rate on the cheaper goods which must be used by the poor. Next he referred to the sale of American manufactured articles abroad at less cost than to the home consumer, even though the claim is made that protection must be had for the American workingman against the cheap labor of the old country.

Mr. Daugherty closed his address with one of the most graphic words he ever delivered in his career, greatest eloquence, carrying an appeal to the voters to stand by Governor Harmon in his fight against the grafters and bootleggers and for good, clean and efficient service in public office.

Following Mr. Daugherty's address a selection was rendered by Baker's band after which, Mr. Guthery introduced Hon. W. T. Smith, the Democratic candidate for representative.

Smith Gives Garfield's Record.

Mr. Smith devoted the greater part of his time to replying to James R. Garfield, who spoke here last Monday and to the canal graft which has been going on in Ohio for many years. He denied the assertion of Mr. Garfield that the Republican party has a corner on the intelligence and the brains of the country. He referred to Garfield's record while a member of the general assembly in the senate, how he voted for the fifty year franchise bill for Cincinnati, which was later corrected with the curative act; how he had voted to give to the B. & O. Railway company valuable lands in the city of Cleveland which the state has been fighting ever since to recover; how he was sent to Chicago by President Roosevelt to investigate the packing houses and had reported that everything was all right and the packers were not making more than one per cent, on their investment and how later Upton St. Clair had made an investigation with the result of uncovering one of the rottenest conditions imaginable and lastly how he had arranged Gov. Harmon and attempted to lay at his door the blame for the defeat of the Woods public utilities bill, when sitting on the same platform with Mr. Garfield at the time he made the declaration there was Senator Cameron from his district who voted against the Woods bill. Mr. Smith spoke at some length on the Woods bill and the ditch which was made for and against it and of his having been told by representatives of the interests two weeks before the vote was taken in the senate, that they had the bill beaten, yet Mr. Garfield undertook to say that the Democratic senators in conference with Governor Harmon on the evening before the vote was taken, determined to defeat the bill.

Canal Claims Are Expensive.

Referring to the canal graft Mr. Smith read from the appropriation bill which was passed by the general assembly. He showed where it has cost the state better than $1,500 to adjust one damage claim of $500 in Hocking county; how that about a half million dollars has been expended on thirty miles of canal between Cleveland and Akron and not a canal boat has passed through the ditch for thirty-five years. Mr. Smith spoke briefly of his proposition to dispose of the canals of the state and place the money in the good roads fund, providing for two lines of road north and south and two lines of road east and west, all of latest improved highway, through each county of the state. He stated that the people will not be content to return to the use of the canals as a means of transportation any more than they will be willing to return to reaping their grain with a candle or to abandon the use of electric and gas lights for the old tallow dip.

Speaking of his record against the liability bill, Mr. Smith stated that he voted against it for the reason that it was unjust to the employer and employee. The provisions of the bill were such that needless litigation would follow any action for damages for personal injuries and in the end the injured man would receive practically nothing. Mr. Smith stated that he was in favor of a just and equitable bill which would give the injured employee a just damage for the injury he had suffered and give it to him at the time when he most needed it, at the time he was injured. He stated that when a labor organization or any other organization brings in a just bill and he is a member of the general assembly he will support it but that he will oppose any measure which works an injustice upon employer or employee.

Mr. Smith closed his address with a stirring appeal to the voters to stand by Governor Harmon in his fight for clean government.

Both speakers were frequently interrupted during the evening by cheers from the audience, which was very responsive and which manifested intense enthusiasm.

The Order of Eastern Star will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in their hall to hold the annual election of officers.
