KENYON

Expects To Hold Reserve To A Low Score

Gambier, Oct. 2.—A vigorous and enthusiastic bonfire rally wound up the week's strenuous work on the gridiron for the Kenyon football team, all of the members making speeches to the assembled students. The spirit of the rally also induced several undecided students to make the trip to Cleveland with the team and witness the Kenyon-Reserve contest Saturday.

The college faculty has declared a holiday for Saturday and the entire student body will witness the game. The team and the majority of the students left on the afternoon train for Cleveland. Coach Matthews will present his most formidable line-up. Several shifts have been made in the past week. Notably of these, was Doll, the husky guard, being put in at half-back. Doll has developed great speed at that position and should make an excellent showing. Kelly, who has been out of the game for the past week, may possibly start in the Reserve contest.

Stout is still holding down the position of right end, while Charles Kinder will probably play the other end. Captain Harry Gayer, who has been resting a strained ankle the past two weeks, will be back in the game Saturday and will play against his old rival, "Tubby" Roe, from whom, one year ago, he wrested the all-state center title. Gayer expects to duplicate his last season's performance.

Coach R. L. Matthews predicts no victory, but states positively that his team will hold Reserve to a very low score.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

FROM OHIO NEWSPAPERS

STRAIGHT SLAP AT THE FARMER

(Caldwell Press.)
England and Belgium and Germany cannot subsist without foreign food. They need the food badly now, worse than ever. The United States has the food in abundance, but how to get it to them was the vital question. Owing to the war, commerce became so uncertain that none of the great insurance companies that insure ships' cargoes could dare to insure them. Since the shipper could not take the risk himself, commerce in food stuffs to Europe ceased.

Uncle Sam came forward with a proposition to insure cargoes of food-stuffs to Europe himself. Nobody doubted his ability to do it, nor that the remedy would be beneficial to the men in this country who have food to sell—the farmer and producer.

Strange as it may seem, however, when the bill came up in the house for passage, the reactionary obstructors jumped onto it. They did this from purely political motives. There could be no other. Congressman Frank B. Willis, Republican candidate for governor of Ohio, voted against this bill, along with the other reactionaries. His vote was for the restriction of the market for every bushel of grain and every pound of potatoes in the United States. And that man—as the nerve to pose as a friend to the farmer and laborer, in the face of such a reactionary vote, and was willing to play with the people's vital interests for political sake. This action speaks louder than any words from Mr. Willis and shows him up for what he really is, a reactionary of the deepest dye.

REPUBLICAN ENGINEER TO OPPOSE PARTY ON ROADS.

(Ohio State Journal.)
Good roads in Ohio depend for their existence upon the continued operation of the state highway department and under the present plan of state control, is the declaration of J. C. Kennedy, civil engineer of Marysville. Though a Republican and having held office as a Republican for more than sixteen years, Mr. Kennedy is vigorous in criticism of his party's platform declaration to abolish the scheme of operation which has given the state a defunct inter-county system of highways and main market roads.

Mr. Kennedy makes his position clear in a letter to State Highway Commissioner Marker.

He says he will not cast his vote this fall against the state highway department and offers his service to the department "in any capacity" that will insure it a long and successful existence.

Regarding his position, Mr. Kennedy says:

"It is a mistake to carry such an important office into politics, and much more serious when any party declares against it. I have been carefully watching the many contracts awarded by you and your department and you deserve great credit for the prices you receive from honorable contractors. You are worthy of the very highest praise for the quality of work which you require and the impartial methods you use in the fulfillment of your contracts."

MANUFACTURED NEWS.

(Elyria Telegram.)
The gross falsifying of facts as sent out from the Republican news bureaus at Washington and Columbus undercuts the intelligence of the reading public, and is too manifestly stimulated by an insatiable hunger for office on the part of the Republican bosses. Stories about the waning popularity of the president show the feebleness of a party which is utterly lacking in any real moral issue, and tries to create one out of falsehood, and misrepresentation. The day has come when voters care very little for parties, but do care for men and principles. They are wise enough to know false from real issues. One would think that after the crushing defeats of the past four years the Republican bosses would stop trying to deceive the people with false news and false issues, and come out with some thing real and vital and worth while for the people to read and support.

THE LAST PLANK.

(Youngstown Vindicator.)
The last plank in the Republican state platform, declaring against the state highway department and for expenditures for good roads to be made by "the regularly constituted authorities of each county," was served out here in Mahoning county, where a few years since a grand jury investigated expenditures by "the regularly constituted authorities," and there were pleas entered and fines imposed and the right to vote suspended. That plank puts Ohio Republicans to the bad.

THAT STRADDLE.

(Greenfield Journal.)
The straddle of the whisky question by Congressman Frank Willis, the Republican nominee for governor, has so disgusted all fair-minded men, irrespective of their party affiliations, that it wouldn't be at all surprising to see Governor Cox re-elected by 75,000 majority. A man who has not got moral courage enough to say where he stands on a public question is not big enough to be governor of Ohio.

TWO COX LAWS.

I have read articles telling of the iniquity of the workmen's compensation and Warnes tax acts, which were inspired doubtless, by powerful and rich interests which were affected by these two laws. I am a plain working man who carries a dinner pail to the factory every morning, spends ten hours a day at manual labor, am well, hearty, have only my daily wages, have no prospects of ever making a fortune to leave my family. Having no bad habits by the practice of economy I saved sufficient to make the first payment necessary to purchase a home on the installment plan.

I, with the private liability insurance companies and the millionaires who have been dodging taxes, also was affected by the workman's compensation and Warnes tax laws. The compensation law gives me free insurance against accidents all the time I am at work, and I tell you it is a wonderful satisfaction to know that my loved ones at home will be cared for by a great and humane state if I should lose my life while at work. The Warnes law has brought a big addition to the tax duplicate in my city, bringing the rate down from $15.75 to $12 per $1,000, and on my little home, which is on the 1914 duplicate for $1,800, I will this year pay $4.76 less than last year.

If Governor Cox's heart wasn't full of sympathy for the man who labors, we would today have a compensation law under which the workingman would either be paying the entire premium for insurance, or half of it, with the employer paying the other half. If "Jimmy" wasn't square with the workingman, we would have a tax law which the millionaires would favor.

J. R. THOMPSON.

Piqua, O., Sept. 7.

AND STILL MORE.

(McArthur Democrat-Enquirer.)
Those persons who have not had the pleasure of reading the Republican state platform should procure a copy of it somewhere and read it. It's brief and will not take much of one's time. Besides the paragraph straddling the liquor question the one notable feature of the document is its declaration about roads. The party declares that it favors abolishing the state highway department, and is in favor of each county building its own roads. At present Vinton county is doing some road building, with the state paying half the cost. If we had to pay all the cost of the building of our roads we would not have many roads when they cost $6,000 per mile. Vinton county never had a mile of pike until the state commenced paying half the bill. If the Republicans are successful and carry out their platform, Vinton county will never be able to build another mile of pike.

The state of Ohio, at this time, is being mighty good to Vinton county. It is not only paying half the cost of building our roads, but it is assisting very much in maintaining our schools.

GOING BACK.

(Caldwell Press.)
"None of your business!" That's the answer given an investigating committee that was trying to find out from an Ohio state treasurer what was done with the public's money. That insulting and arrogant answer was typical of the conditions of that time, and was but a frank avowal of the Republican party's attitude toward the common people of the state. They were puffed with power and bloated with pride, to the place where they thought it was an unwarranted and meddling question for the people to be asking of them. But the committee had an old-fashioned idea that perhaps it was some of their business and it persisted. It discovered a little here and uncovered a little there until, putting two and two together, it began to see a great light ahead. We all remember the sickening, denuding revelations that followed and how the fair name of our state was besmirched. We all remember the revelations of private fortunes reared on interest on state funds illegally diverted into private coffers. We all remember the monuments reared in commemoration of that regime. They are standing today in Columbus in the form of skyscrapers. Then came the legislative scandals and the dictagraph exposures of sordid bribe-giving and bribe-taking, also the state primary scandals revealing graft and wrecking innocent wives and children's lives. This is not a pleasant memory. But, you inquire, where were the present leaders of the Republican party then? That's what a good many people would like to know. Where was Willis? Where was Harding? Where was Daugherty? Did you hear one of them raise their clarion voices against all this slime and graft and sordid stealing? You did not. They went to go back. Back to what? The same conditions? With the same leaders at the helm and the same instincts at heart, what else could be expected than that they go back to their former habits? You haven't heard of any of them getting religion have you? To get away from them and their ways is what made the voters of Ohio turn the old state inside-out, politically. Will they go back so soon? Well, hardly.
