BATON ROUGE:

IN THE ARMY OF THE EMPEROR .- A private letter from Bordeaux to a gentleman of this city states that our friend and fellow-citizen J. E. Testard is still in the Army of the Emperor. In order that he may not get out again, he has a body guard Testard is however negotiating. and thinks that for the sum of about $700 he may find as good a man as himself and a fitter subject for gunpowder. We hope so. Do it quick ly Testard-do it before they have a chance to send you off sogering for the glory of the Empire. In such an adventure you might get a ball in your head and fill the last place that any sensible man can desire to locate. Pay the $700 Tes-tard and come home.

BOUNDARY SURVEY .- W. H. Rus sell, E-q, who was appointed Texas boundary commissioner by the Governor, to meet with the U. S. com missioner and complete the boundary survey between the United States and Texas, has arrived in San Antonio. The Ledger says :

Mr. Russell informs us that the work has been completed, and that the country through which the line is almost valueless. It took the Texas commissioner one day less than a month to run the line, a distance of near two hundred and fifty miles, from the north or main prong of Red river to the northwest corner of the "Panhandle." We are informed tha We are informed that on the whole line there are but a few portions capable of animal life, and these are but cases along the parallel of 32° north latitude, and on the line of 100° west longitude. Game is very scarce except in early spring and winter, when the whole eastern por-tion of the "Panhandle" country is overrun by immense herds of Buffalo and the Indians that follow in their

A SINGULAR WILL.-We read in the European papers that an American planter, worth about $100,000 who died lately, left by his will his fortune to his brother's children, un der the following singular conditions copied from the will:

"Wishing to repay the devotion of my Newfoundland dog, which one day saved me from drowning, and in tending at the same time to leave at income to my house-keeper, I appoint her the nurse, guardian and mother of my dog. natural heirs will be obliged to pay her, as such, from my total fortune, a daily rent under the following conditions:

That income will last as long as the Newfoundland lives, but not one second more.

"During the first twelve-month af ter the day of my death, so long as the dog lives, the house-keeper will receive $5 a day; $10 a day, for the second twelve-month; $15 for the third one, and so forth, at the same rate, until the dog dies.

"She will receive besides $125 for every day of the dog's existence during its last month; $250 for every hour it lives during its leat day.

hour it lives during its last day; $375 for every minute of the last hour, and $500 for every second of the last minute."

Under those conditions the house keeper's annual income will be $1,825 for the first year, $3,650 for the second, $5,475 for the third, &c. Supposing the dog finally to die on the 30th of the month, at one second to 12 o'clock in the forenoen, the bill to be paid by the heirs will be:

To 30 days of the last month at $125 each. $ 3,750 "11 hours of the last day at $350 each... 2,750 "59 minutes of the last hour at $375 each 2,2125 "59 secouds of the last minute at $500 " 29,500

It is sure that the happy dog will be very well cared for by its mother during its whole lifetime, and very little lamented after its death, unle it dies at midnight on the first day of a month, for then its guardian would receive but $125.—Picayune.

In obedience to Garibaldi's order, the artillery director Orsini, who is at the head of the gun-foundry at Palermo, is now superintending the casting of a magnificent bell, which is destined for the church of Santa Maria de Angeli of tha city, and to be rung on the 4th of April of every year, for the purpose of announcing to all coming genera-tions that the first signal—shot for the national resurrection of the island proceeded from that cloister church. On the bell will be engraven the year, day and hour in which the bells of the convent summoned the inhabitants of the city to arms.

ANOTHER MANIFESTO. On his recent visit to New Orleans, a number of politicians and gentlemen of leisure addressed a letter to Gov. Moore, asking an expression of his opinion as to what should be done in an emergency which is expected to arise. The Governor answers in a two column letter, which was no doubt intended to be a private matter, but which has found its way into the newspapers, and is now the subject of very extended comment. We need hardly say, that, if not intended for party purposes, it will be used for party effect, and it comes at a most opportune moment. Our Senior Senator has been heard on the same subject, and all the other high functionaries, Parochial, State and Federal. Indeed it is a fortunate circumstance in connection with what Monsieur De Tocqueville and Sir William Jones are pleased to call "Democracy in America," that there is no office from that of Constable down to President, where the duties are so onerous that the occupant cannot find leisure to talk, write and stump it, and it is principally for this reason that we now find so much harmony and good will existing between our widely separated extremities. But for this circumstance, the people might lapse back into ignorance and barbarism. We all feel and know it to be a fact, that the place from which a man speaks, carries more weight with it than the person of the man, or what he says .-It is for this reason that the press has adopted a nomenclature for the classification of great men according to their caliber. There are large guns and great guns, carrying cannister and grape, popguns and blow-guns, flaps, fizzles and flip-flaps. When one of the largest go off and indicate what ought to be done-the people, who have the power to do it, set right about the business, quitting all their more honest and profitable vocations. If the Union is to be dissolved; all necessary to have the work of dissolution accomplished with convenient dispatch, is for some of the larger guns to point their mouths this way. We hope they will not do it until they have calculated fully the chances. We are opposed to it-not only on policy, but because we feel satisfied that we have so many exalted patriots this side of the line, that we could not, without a fight or a footrace, settle on one for President of the Southern Confederacy, where there are so many of equal virtue. From Governor Moore's letter we take it, that like many other gentlemen we wot of, he is both in favor of, and opposed to a dissolution. In Platonic days this would have been considered paradoxical; but not so in the prolix refinement of modern logic. The Governor thinks there is cause for it and there is not cause for it; a contingency may not arise, and whilst he hopes that it will not; uses his position as Chief Magistrate of this Governor sees only one way to avert it, and that is, for everybody to vote for Mr. Breckinridge, in one stone. Perhaps when the Governor says-there is cause, and a contingency may arise, it is done to frighten us. Indeed it might have this effect, if fresh and new; but it has been said so often that it does not produce the desired effect. The Picayune says : The most singu The Picayune says: The most singular episode in the present Presidential canvass is the letter of Gov. Moore, of this State, which has just been made public.—The object of the letter is two-fold. 1. To effect the union of all men, particularly in the State of Louisiana, against the sectional party of the North. 2. To indicate the course of policy the State should adopt in care of the election of Mr. Lincoln.

Though temperate in expression, it is conceived in a spirit that ensures its failure to accomplish the former: and it lacks the boldness and frankness to mark out any well defined action as the results of a Republican victory.

The Gov. says: It will probably be asked, if Lincoln be elected President, what should the South do? To that I answer, that I do not regard it as wise or prudent to commit myself, either at a citizen or a magistrate, to any extreme measure. But speaking for myself, and for myself alone, I am free to say that the success of Mr. Lincoln would justify the Southern States in withdrawing from the Union. But I do not advise, or bind myself personally, or officially, to this particular course.

The Bee says: Nincteen gentlemen—nearly all well known friends of Mr. Breckinridge—wrote a letter to Gov. Moore, asking for his opinions in regard to the proper policy of the people of Loulaiana in the present cirsis. The Governor replies in a two column letter of dreary political common-places, in yesterday's Evening Delta; and what think you, is the upshot of his prolik letter? Why that the people of Louisiana ought to vote for John Evening Delta; and what think you, is the upshot of his prolix letter? Why that the people of Louisiana ought to vote for John C. Breckinridge. This is the sum and substance of the document, which is devoted to and examination of the claims of the several candidates, and is little better than an electioneering manifesto like that of John Slidell, but in better taste, and with less coarseness.

Ber It is said that Paganini, who was at one time desperately fond of gamming, was cured of the passion in the following manner : His favorite violin was a large Guarnerius, which a Russian Prince was anxious to pur-chase from him. He often asked Paganini to sell it to him, and at last the latter tired of his repeated appeals, told him he would sell the violin for $1,000. The Prince told him he must be joking to ask such a sum of money, but that he would give him $500 for it. Paganini had lost everthing he owned at gaming tables the night before; his jewels, his rings, his breastpins, his watch, had all been lost, and he had nothing in the world but thirty francs and his violin left. He was about to accept the Prince's offer, when he determined to appeal once more to the gaming table. did so-he lost, lost, lost-nothing was left in his hand but three france lost, lost-nothing and he was oblige to leave the next day for St Petersburg. He staked these three francs. The run of luck turned, and he soon won money enough to carry him to St. Peters burg. "I am saved!" said Paganini, speaking of this incident. sure of keeping my beloved Guarne rius. Since then, I saw that a gam-bler is the most contemptible being on the earth, and I have never again touched a card: - Baltimore Exchange

HARD WORK .- It's hard work to go up a hill without leaning forward -it's hard work for a "neutral" editor to speak of politics without lean-Union-loving people to induce the ing one way or the other. It's hard belief, that outside of a small lot of work to make a dinner out of grape shot, unless they are well boile talking men, that the sentiment and it's hard work to digest a fool's of Louisiana bears that way. The argument unless it be soaked in something like a reason. It's hard work to do nothing, and have too much of it on hand-and it's hard work to to vote for Mr. Breckinridge, in collect a debt of one who says "call this way killing several birds with again to-morrow." It's hard work to squeeze cider out or brick-bat—and it's hard work to scratch out ideas for a paragraph, after being on a spree for twenty four hours. It's hard work to hold lightning by the tail—and it's hard work to stem the torrent of a woman's will; but the hardest work of all, is to edit and print a newspaper that will please everybody.

> A letter from Lima says a tailor, who said in court that he thought he could recognize the assassin of General Castro, was wayland in the street at night by four men, who told him : "We will not kill you, but we shall make you harmless;' they then rubed his eyes with vitriol, which completely blinded him. The unhappy man has received a pension from the President.

A LIFE PICTURE.-She was beautiful! The lamp light threw its brilliant glare upon her Venus-like form ce, as she trod the hall of revelry. That night she was led, a beauteous bride, to the hymeneal altar. He to whom she had given her hand and heart was a tall, noble looking young man of twenty-one summers. The impress of genius was indelibly stamped upon his noble brow, and as he stood up by her side in that pallatial mansion, and plighted eternal fidelity to her whom he held by his hand, a silent ejaculation went up to Heaven from every heart, that their lives might be as one bright summer day. This closes the first part of the scene—let the curtain fall or the space of three years. Hark! what sound is that I hear?

Tis the low murmuring of the night wind sighing among the tree tops; no! 'tis a sadder wail than winds or waves have ever made! "Tis the voice of a woman in despair. I stood in front of the proud mansion she used to love to call her home. The pale moonbeams were sleeping around me in death-like stillness? Again a sad wail rent the air and made it hideous with its mournful cadences, and a voice was heard above the wail: "Why don't he come? O God, save my husband from a drunkard's grave!" I stood transfixed. She was standing in the portico fronting the street leaning against one of those high col umns, her face, as reflected by the pale rays of the moon, was ghost-like in appearance. She was weeping, yes sadly weeping the lonely hours away! At length he came ; beastly intoxicated, and with threats and oaths, he threw himself upon the floor, a raving maniac. I tore myself away from the scene of horrror. I could no longer gaze upon a picture, at the sight of which the heart turns faint and sick. No earthly power could separate him from the wine cup, and in a few months he died from mania a potu. She, too, the once joyous bride, now sleeps in the quiet church-yard, the victim of a broken heart!— Literary Companion.

A CLOCK .- There is an old Dutch clock in Albany, of which the Standard of that city relates the following strange freaks: "We last evening heard a story, in which the strange freaks of a clock are related. The clock is one of those tall Dutch kind, that were so much in vogue during the early part of the last half century. It is no earthly use to the owner—a Broadway merchant—and has not been for upward of twelve years, yet he keeps it in good shape in one corner of the house, as a relic of days gone by. The clock originally came from Germany in the year 1765. It was brought over by a German named Wilhelm Spitz. In the year 1800 it became the property of the present owner, and has remained in the family ever since. As we have already said, the clock is use less as a time-piece, and it is only retained for its family connections. The remarkable feature of the clock is, that, although it resists all at tempts of the repairer to make it run or strike, it invariably strikes previous to the death of any member of the family. The last striking took place a week ago Sunday .-Yesterday the news reached here that a nephew of the owner, who was traveling in Europe, had been suddenly killed while out riding .-This fact seems strange and almost incredible, but from the manner in which the story is connected, and the well-known veracity of the narrator, we have every reason to be lieve its truth."

WHAT SHALL WE DO FOR COFFEE? It appears from statistics recently pubis increasing much more rapidly than the production. Last year the total consumption of Europe and the United States alone, was 330,000 ton whilst the production of all countries was but 312,000 tons. The probable consumption of the present year is estimated at 307,000 tons, and the prob able production at 274,000, and the next year, the former at 313,000 tons, the latter at 345,000.

We hope with all our heart that it will become so costly that none but those who can afford without incon venience to pay large doctors' bills can afford to use it.-N. Y. Evening

STONE MOUNTAIN HOTEL BURNT,-This extensive establishment was de stroyed by fire between two and three o'clock on (Saturday) morning. It is believed to have been caused by some defect in one of the chimney flues. The hotel was kept by Judge Alexander, and the loss is believed to be about $25,000. A portion of the furniture war saved.

We understand there was an insur ance on the house and furniture for $15,000.—Augusta Constitutionalist. Written for the Gazette and Comet.

Pale Autumn leaves, sere Autumn leaves, Crushed 'neath each restless tread— How your rustling, to my heart, Speaks of the early dead.

They that were gathered by my side Through all youth's summer day— That budded fair as spring-time flowers, And passed as soon away.

Oh, withered, dying Autumn leaves, Or rustling 'neath my thread— Or stirred by sighing gales—ye bring Sad memories of the dead.

So darkly in the chill damp earth Is laid each lovely brow-O, all unheading of the tears That fall above them now.

Ye waken ever in my heart A deep and yearning prayer, For the blest hour that shall restore Our earth as Eden fair.

And robe it in persunial green, Bedecked with fadeless flowers-Where changing sessons bring no blight To dim the blooming bowers, St. James, October 1860.

LAGER BIER ON THE RISE .- The New York correspondent of the Boston Post says:

Lager Bier is King at last! Cot ton is deposed, and the Ebony Idol must finally give place to the Teu-tontic beverage. And why, say you? There is a startling rumor around town to-day to the effect that Lindenmuller, the Bowery Lager seller, has leased Stewart's marble palace on Broadway, for twenty years, and proposes to turn it into a vast billiard and bier saloon. Retailing of drinks supplants the retailing of dry goods. Women's husbands hereafter will run up their own bills at the great shop, and men's wives must do their traffic further up town. Stewart's establishment is to be transferred to the neighborhood of Ninth street, in Broadway, and as soon as the big shopkeeper's arrage ments are completed for removal Lindenmuller is to have possession of the marble palace. Now, isn't this a rumor worth ventilating.
