To Steamboat and Poleboat Owners.

WHEREAS, it has hitherto been the practice, where boats arrived at the wharf in this town, for the owner to order the goods on board to be put out on the bank forthwith, without considering whether or not they could be hauled up before night. Now to show the impropriety of such practice, I state the following facts. On Friday evening last four boats arrived, some of their loading was delivered on the same evening, and all the remainder was thrown out on the bank on Saturday. All that could be done on the bank on Saturday, was done, and myself, till 8 o'clock at night, and yet many headstays, sugar, casks, &c. remained, and were exposed to the weather and the depredations of thieves from Saturday night till Monday morning. Such goods must of course be considered at the risk of the boat owners. To prevent misapprehensions, for the future I hereby give the following NOTICE.

WHEN notified that goods consigned to me are landed, I shall use due diligence to have them hauled; but all such goods landed without my consent, and remaining on the river bank after sunset shall be at the risk of the boat owners. FELIX LONG, 131. Nov. 15.
