

HIGHWAYMEN HOLD UP A MAN IN CLEVELAND SQUARE

While passing Cleveland square about 10 o'clock Friday night L. B. Crawford, a drug clerk residing at 720 Mundy avenue, was held up by two men. One of the highwaymen stuck a revolver in his face and demanded that he throw up his hands. But instead of complying with the request, Crawford turned and ran toward town at breakneck speed.

Reaching the plaza, he notified the policeman on the beat of the holdup and said one of the holdup men had followed him a block toward town. The officers went on a hunt for the robbers, but did not find them, and Crawford rode home on a street car.

EVEN A SOUL PINCHOT IS KISS DID READY TO NOT HOLD TESTIFY

Actress Divorces Husband
Who Gave Her a Six Minute
Kiss on Wedding Eve.

Informing Investigating Committee That He Is Ready to Give His Evidence.

DIVORCE ISSUED IN SAN FRANCISCO

Denver, Colo., Feb. 5.—"Heavens! May Buckley obtains a divorce on the ground that her husband was cruel to her. If a man who gives his fiancée a soul kiss, lasting six minutes by the clock, can be cruel to his wife, what can we expect of men who do not kiss at all?"

This was the tenor of the exclamation that went the rounds of the smart set last night, when it was learned that May Buckley (our May), the pride of Elitch's Gardens during several seasons, and the pet of Denver society, was yesterday in San Francisco granted a divorce from Charles Walter Martin Sabine, whom she married at the witching hour of midnight under the apple trees at Elitch's on June 27, 1908, says the News. Although the news of the divorce caused a sensation, the fact that the pretty actress got the decree on the ground of cruelty brought the greatest surprise.

Never apparently, was there a more ideal love match than that of Martin Sabine and May Buckley. When he arrived to claim his bride on June 25, his first act on stepping from the train was to pick up his little fiancée and greet her with a soul kiss that lasted six minutes by the clock at the union station. When the news of that enduring kiss became noised abroad through the city, it caused the breaking of several engagements. It is said, because the young men could not come up to the standard set by the Englishman.

"He certainly must love her," quoth the disconsolate suitors, "or he wouldn't kiss her so enchantingly."
That Buckley-Martin kiss was put down as the supreme test of true love, and the swains who failed had solitaires to sell cheap.

Then came the romantic marriage under the apple tree, when the couple swore eternal love under the stars, and it was deemed that in comparison with this affair all others sank into insignificance as far as romance and true love were concerned. No one had a doubt but they would bill and coo the rest of their lives and that never a harsh word would be spoken on either side.

According to the dispatch from San Francisco, the suit was not contested.

CARPENTER SAWS OFF FALLS SIX STORIES; STILL LIVES LOG, SITTING ON END

New York, Feb. 5.—Patrick Diskin, a carpenter, who recently came to New York from the west, is in the hospital because he deliberately sawed off the end of a log on which he was seated six stories above ground.

Diskin had been ordered to saw off the end of the log, which projected from a window over the street. He went up, got out on the end of the beam and carefully sawed it in two between himself and the window. He and the end of the log fell together to the pavement, yet, remarkable to relate, Diskin was not seriously hurt.

When asked today why he had done such a thing, Diskin replied with some heat: "Sure, then was me orders."

HERE'S AN EXAMPLE OF A NEW YORK PUBLIC OFFICIAL

New York, Feb. 5.—Mayor Gaynor has been endeavoring to find out just how much some of the high salaried city employes have been doing to earn their money. Several were asked to make personal reports of their duties. Here is the literal transcription of the report by a water register, who draws $3000 a year:

"Generell busnes off water rejeter, seen that all clerks rive on time. Seen that they do duty every day. Seen all permit to take out meter. Seen that send out bills. Seen that constructors pay bills every day to settle all disputes. Seen all bills & complaints look after. Seen Joe Mole and Malore every day."

Mayor Gaynor's commissioner was so pleased with this report that he sent several short columns of figures to the Bronx register and asked him to add them up.

Either the commissioner or the register made a lot of mistakes, for the totals did not come near agreeing.

30 MINERS ARE PAULHAN NOT CAUGHT IN A SUCCESS EXPLOSION IN WEST

Latest Report of Explosion Comes From Pennsylvania; Dozen Are Victims.

DYNAMITE THE CAUSE OF IT

Indiana, Pa., Feb. 5.—An explosion, caused, it is reported, by dynamite, tore the timber and bracing to pieces and buried 12 men in the lower workings of mine No. 2 at Ernest, five miles north of here, today.

Several men were taken from the mine burned and injured. Rescue parties have as yet failed to reach the entombed miners.

The first reports said a hundred men were in the mine, but it developed later that but a dozen were below the ground.

Later outside reports say that 30 men are yet entombed. A rescue party headed by state mine inspectors entered the mine at 10 this morning and at 2 o'clock had not been heard from. A rescue party is expected for their safety.

VALE THE ADOBES; RISE THE SKYSCRAPER

Wrecking Of Ancient Mud Building Recalls Old El Paso.

As an epitome of the transition of El Paso from a Mexican town of adobe and straw to a modern city of steel and concrete, the passing of the little house of sun dried brick on the corner of Mesa avenue and St. Louis street, to make room for the four story Roberts-Banner building, is symbolic of the new El Paso era, the age of the skyscraper.

Built in the days when everything was adobe from river to mesa, the little low roofed house, with its four rooms and a patio, withstood the encroachments of the new until, like the line of adobe buildings that fronted on El Paso street in the early days, it has crumbled away before the picks of the Mexican workmen, blazing the way for the modern fireproof structures of the skyscraper era.

The Ancient Architecture. Concealed from view by the store fronts on Mesa avenue and St. Louis street, the squat little adobe house had been forgotten today by the newcomers and was never known by the newcomers until the wreckers revealed it, when the store fronts were removed. There it stood in all of its original form, retaining its primitive style of southwestern architecture. There it had stood proudly in its coating of whitewash in the old days, when the plaza was but an open square of mud or sand, and Mesa avenue was known as North Utah street.

The three ply roof of poles, with its load of adobe mud, the quaint corner fireplaces that furnished both heat and ventilation, the adobe floor, packed hard by many feet, and the canvas ceiling to prevent the tarantulas and centipedes from dropping on the heads of the occupants, were all to be seen in the flat roofed house. Many plaza loafers shuffled over to watch the work of tearing it down with more than the usual bystanders' interest.

Belonged to a Minister. The little house and the Old Mexico Trading company store, which adjoined it on the west, both of which are being razed, were the property of Joseph Wilkin Tays, known as "parson" (Continued on Page Seven.)
