VALLEY FARMERS ARE PROTESTING AGAINST THE TAX ON HUCKSTERS

Declare It Is a Good Way to Discourage Development of the Valley—Alderman Thinks Sanitary Provisions Necessary.

Joining the union men who threaten to buy their goods in bulk at wholesale and ship them into the city if the grocers keep up their fight on the hucksters, the valley farmers now threaten to take a hand. Council has been engaged to fight the tax which grocers to police upon hucksters. The valley vegetable growers declare that if the city is going to discourage hucksters, it means a hard blow at the development of the agricultural resources of the valley.
The grocers declare that they are only after the hucksters who buy and sell after the men who peddle their own stuff, but the valley farmers say that is not the way the ordinance reads, and declares also that as every valley huckster buys a few oranges and berries to go with his stock of vegetables, he will be hit by the new ordinance.

Grocers Pay No License.
Insofar as the retail grocers of the city have entered a protest against the practice of permitting hucksters and other peddlers to work in the city without paying a license, an investigation shows that all peddlers pay state, city and county occupation taxes in addition to advance license taxes on their outfits.
The Merchants' Standpoint.
The ordinance, passed in 1907, is not compelled to pay any but the advance license taxes.

A peddler with a horse and wagon pays $1.25 to the city and $3.75 to the city annually besides his advance license tax, while the ordinary peddler that runs about the city with a basket on his arm peddling goods pays $1.50 to the county and $2.50 to the city for the privilege, while the merchants outside of El Paso and liquor dealers pay no occupation tax whatever, according to city and county officials.
The Merchants' Standpoint.
Jos. U. Sweeney, attorney for the retail grocers, speaking of the occupation tax which it is proposed to place on peddlers, said Saturday morning the ordinance will not affect the grocers of foodstuffs nor the manufacturers thereof nor their employees. It is simply proposed to regulate the sale of different kinds of merchandise in the city limits and will affect those who purchase goods outside, ship them in and sell them about the streets. Some of them do not pay any taxes and it is the desire of the grocers and others to force them to do this.
"The amount of the tax was not mentioned in the ordinance, that being left for the city council to determine and consequently a plan was left blank upon by the council may be inserted."

From a Sanitary Point.
Alderman W. S. Clayton, discussing the ordinance, which passed its first reading last Thursday, said: "There has as yet been no opposition, and the principal reason why I should like to see the ordinance go into effect is a sanitary one. We heard last week that one of the hucksters had washed his vegetables in a horse trough on Wyoming street, and that is dangerous, because horses drinking therefrom may have very serious diseases. I would also suggest that all peddlers be required to report at some certain place where their truck can be properly inspected by the sanitary officers. Under present conditions many escape inspection. However, if there is any objection, we will lay the matter over and investigate it before passing the ordinance, but if no opposition develops we will pass it Thursday."

Hucksters Protest.
There was a meeting of hucksters and others interested in the proposed ordinance Saturday morning in the office of R. L. Nichols, who is the attorney. A protest was prepared and was filed with the city clerk Saturday afternoon for consideration by the city council before any action is taken on the proposed ordinance. The protesters set forth the following allegations:
"First, that about 75 men are engaged in this business in El Paso and must support families.
"Second, that the clamor for taxation does not come from the people but from the retail grocers who are not paying any state, county or city occupation taxes, while peddlers who have two horses may pay $2 a year, and therefore the grocers should be the last to complain.
"Third, that many citizens of El Paso live in the suburbs, where the small grocery stores are not properly equipped to care for the fresh fruits and vegetables, and if the hucksters are taxed, they will not be able to get fresh vegetables in these sections.
"Fourth, that, while it does not seek to prevent the grocer from selling his produce, few of the valley ranchers are raising sufficient produce to warrant their running a wagon, and the hucksters who purchase goods outside of the city are able during July, August and September to purchase from these valley farmers, affording them a market, otherwise they would be at the mercy of merchants, and in many instances would be unable to dispose of their produce, which is perishable and cannot be kept long.
"We therefore ask for conservative action as we afford a more adequate and better market for the valley growers."

"That, while we favor better sanitary conditions and are willing to cooperate with the city health department, we would be opposed to anything that would compel our holding up until 9 or 10 o'clock for inspection and thereby losing our trade.
"Further, the present tax is sufficient, but if we are overruled, we would ask that it be regulated along conservative lines and that hucksters be permitted to pay every six months instead of every month. And ask that the amount of the tax be made public and given over to discussion before definite action is taken."

COTTON.

New York Cotton.
New Orleans, La., May 28.—The New York cotton market closed in observance of decoration day and there was little influence on the market today other than the weather condition and the drift in manipulations. One important feature is the announcement of James A. Patten that he shortly will retire from business and take a long needed rest. This is construed to mean that he will abandon his operations both in cotton and grain and is given as the cause for liquidation by many timid holders and outside interests with the result that the close of the week finds cotton materially declined since the opening Monday. Weather conditions continue favorable over the belt and this aids holding the price of the staple on the downgrade.
Liverpool Cotton.
