

Guaranty Fund Bank Talk

No good reason has ever been given why the Individual Depositor should not be given absolute protection for his funds deposited in a Bank.

To meet this defect the state of Texas enacted a law for the creation of a Depositor's Guaranty Fund to be used to secure depositors against loss.

This law is the best and gives the most absolute security to depositors known and loss of deposits guaranteed by the fund is impossible.

This Depositor's Guaranty Fund is created by assessment against State Banks operating under the provisions of the Guaranty Fund law, and is to be maintained at two million dollars, an amount ample to meet all demands that may be made upon it.

The fund is kept to protect the non-interest bearing and unsecured deposits of the depositor and places such deposits upon a pedestal of security that has restored the confidence of the most skeptical and has returned to circulation large sums of money that had been hoarded.

No depositor in a Guaranty Fund Bank operating under the laws of the state of Texas has ever lost a penny and loss is impossible with the strict supervision exercised by the state.

No opponent of the Depositor's Guaranty Law has ever offered anything to take its place and no valid objection thereto has ever been made.

The problem has been solved in Texas and the people are given the protection they desire and to which they are entitled.

We operate under this Depositor's Guaranty Law of the state of Texas, and as a

We ask you to bring us your account, and offer you the protection guaranteed by the law.

LEECH MAKING STRENUOUS EFFORT TO CARRY HIS CASE AWAY FROM EL PASO

Davis, a commission dealer; G. E. Fischer, city patrolman who placed Leech under arrest; Sheriff F. J. Hall, M. Wyatt, cashier of the American National bank, J. W. White, a railroad man employed on the eastern division of the El Paso & Southwestern; A. J. Lightfoot, a real estate dealer; Sam Craig, a saloon-keeper on Missouri street, and Mike Weber, who runs a small shop near the union station. The same general questions were asked these witnesses as those introduced on Friday, the defense confirming its questions to the attitude of the people of El Paso toward the defendant.

Leech seemed in much better spirits Saturday than on the preceding day and he talked with his attorneys and laughed at the pleasantries which were bantered back and forth by the lawyers in the case. He is taking more interest in his own case than on Friday and, twice during the morning session he talked with attorney Gardner, who is calling the witnesses in the preliminary part of the big fight. When talking with his attorneys, Leech's voice is harsh and high and almost effeminate, scarcely having sufficient volume to be heard from the prisoner's chair to that occupied by his attorney, Gardner, on the opposite side of judge Wharton.

Walter Kohlberg and S. Aronstein were again in court when it opened Saturday morning, occupying seats in the jury box directly facing the witnesses, while they were on the stand. Both smoked constantly and watched the hearing with the deepest interest.

At 2 o'clock, further testimony was dispensed with and arguments began. Witnesses Heard Friday. Henry Capell, of The Herald, was the first witness called Friday afternoon by the defense and was asked to identify copies of The Herald that appeared on the afternoon of the killing of E. Kohlberg and subsequently. He testified that The Herald had 4500 circulation in El Paso and 500 additional in El Paso county.

Thomas O'Keefe, of The Times, was also called for the same purpose and was excused without being cross-examined. He was not asked to give any circulation figures.

Fred Barker, a restaurant keeper on St. Louis street, was examined as to where he had heard of the killing and what was the result of the reports which had been circulated and printed. Barker was on the stand longer than any other witness during the taking of testimony in support of the motion for a change of venue. He was followed by C. T. Pierce, a clerk of the Jarrrell-Ballard store on South Oregon. The same questions were put to him by the defense as to the reports he had heard and the attitude of the public mind after hearing these reports. H. C. F. Geiseler, one of the subscribing witnesses to the affidavit that the defendant could not get a fair and impartial trial, was next introduced. J. A. Brock, a grocery dealer; George W. Snyder, an insurance agent at the office of H. B. Stevens, were called and testified to the feeling on the streets after the killing.

E. A. Clay was the last witness examined before adjournment was taken for the day. He was also a subscribing witness to the affidavit, which was the ground for the motion for a change of venue.

Leech Shows Little Interest. Leech seemed to have lost the nervousness which was so noticeable at the morning session, and during the afternoon he sat between his attorneys and watched the proceedings with a sluggish sort of interest. He made no suggestions to his attorneys during the hearing of the evidence. He watched the court stenographer, kept his eyes on the reporters' desk a part of the time and the remainder of the time sat in the same position as he occupied at the morning session, partially facing the witness and partially with his face toward the jury box. When the court was adjourned for the day and the shackles had been applied to his wrists, Leech spied a newboy at the foot of the stairs and, reaching his mangled hands into his pocket, he bought a Herald and took it to the county jail with him to read the account of the first day's proceedings in his life battle.

The crowd in the court room when the afternoon session began was even larger than that of the morning. The Legal Array. The defense will probably be conducted by attorney J. E. Wharton with attorney P. E. Gardner as his associate. Attorney Wharton conducted the examination of witnesses while attorney Gardner called the witnesses and offered suggestions during the examination. District attorney W. D. Howe conducted the cross-examination with judge T. A. Falvey and Victor C. Moore at his side to offer suggestions, Judge Falvey arguing any exceptions that were taken. M. W. Stanton took no part in this preliminary hearing but sat near the railing and listened to the evidence introduced. Frequent suggestions were also offered the attorneys for the state by D. M. Jackson and W. H. Burgess, who sat in the jury box.

know not when he will arrive here to spend the summer. EXTRA FEDERAL GUARD DOWN AT DEL RIO. No indications of Trouble, But Neither Government to Be Caught Napping on Sunday.

Del Rio, Texas, June 25.—Apprehension of trouble along the border because of the Mexican national election to be held Sunday, is not felt here, there being no activity on either side of the Rio Bravo, according to statements of federal peace officials of the United States and Mexico.

Stores here selling fire arms and ammunition report practically no sales within the past few weeks that are not for legitimate purposes. As a means of precaution, United States officials have been on the ground looking into conditions on this side and the same precautionary measures have been taken by the Mexican people. Two years ago an insipient revolution was pulled off on the Mexican side here.

ANTI-REELECTIONISTS IN CIUDAD JUAREZ ACTIVE. Big Club with Many Prominent Men as Officers, All Opposed to Diaz.

With the Mexican national election booked for Sunday, it develops that anti-reelectionists have not been inactive in Ciudad Juarez, and there will be a heavy vote polled against the long standing president of the republic.

AN ANTI-REELECTIONIST club was quietly organized May 15, and since that time has carried on a vigorous campaign. Its self-confessed organ, "Patria Libre" (Free Fatherland) appeared on the streets of Juarez a few weeks ago, and every Sunday political meetings have been held in Teatro Juarez, where oratory against the present regime has flowed freely.

Officers of the anti-administration organization are prominent citizens of Juarez. Their names appear in all issues of "Patria Libre." Officers of the "Club Antireelectionista" are: President, Juan A. Amador, junior member of the law firm of Seljas & Amador; vice president, Jose S. Gutierrez, a prominent broker; secretary, Juan N. Medina, Mexican agent for the El Paso Gas company; The Directors are Pedro Maese, Genaro Bernal and P. D. Gonzales, each more or less prominent in business and society. Leading the list of patrons of "Patria Libre" is Camillo Argueta, customs broker and member of a most prominent and wealthy Chihuahua family.

Without hesitation, "Patria Libre" each week leads its first page display with a streamer announcing, "Our Candidates for President, Francisco I. Madero; for vice president, Dr. Francisco Vazquez Gomez."

Saloons Closed. All saloons and other drinking places in Juarez were closed Friday night and will not be legally opened until Monday morning.

Juarez citizens will vote at 13 polling places, whatever that unlucky number may denote. Each voter is given a slip of paper on which is written his name and on this he indicates the name of his candidate. For senator of the state of Chihuahua, the anti-reelectionist ticket shows Juan B. Baca, and for alternative senator, Camillo Argueta, of Juarez.

CHIEF OF POLICE OF CITY OF MEXICO HERE. Gen. Diaz Consults With Juarez Officials—Says He Is Only on a Vacation. Brig. Gen. Felix Diaz, chief inspector of police of Mexico City, and nephew of president Diaz, is in El Paso. He arrived Saturday morning directly from the national capital, immediately proceeding by street car to Ciudad Juarez, where the morning was spent in visiting with military and civil officials of the border city.

When seen at hotel St. Regis by The Herald, Gen. Diaz said that he was on a two months' vacation, now en route to California on private business. The official denied that his visit had any connection with the election condition or that he was traveling on ought but private business. Accompany him are Jose Veres, a lawyer, and Carlos Hernandez, notary public, both of Mexico City.

Following the banquet, addresses were made by judge Lea, James Phipps, Thomas McEniry and others. The new lodge officers are: Worshipful master, L. E. Gillett; senior warden, E. W. Pew; junior warden, Grant Martin; senior deacon, W. W. Evans; junior deacon, V. E. Ware; senior steward, G. M. Miller; junior steward, John Mershon; tiler, John Hughes.
