HOW TO FIND OUT

Fill a bottle or common glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling usually indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. Too frequent desire to urinate, scanty supply, pain or dull ache in the back, should also convince you that the kidneys or bladder are out of order.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, fulfills almost every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold urine, and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate.

The mild, pleasant and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful results in the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, and a book that tells all about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing be sure to mention that you read this generous offer in the El Paso Herald. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

This morning's mail brought an order to Jackson's Sanitary Grocery from the Waldorf-Astoria, New York city, for 2 crates of El Paso Valley cantaloupes every day. In that letter they stated that the El Paso valley cantaloupe is much better than any other grown and that they will probably increase their order to 50 crates a week. The fact that the Waldorf-Astoria ordered from Jackson's Sanitary Grocery is proof that they know that Jackson's handles only the best and always serves it to his customers.

Lucky Fortunes In Oil

Poor Men Become Millionaires and Wonders of Newly Opened Fields Grow More Wonderful—The Superintendent Who Disobeyed Orders.

After going broke in the Los Angeles oil, Ed. Doheny and Charles Canfield began looking for pastures now. As assets each had a set of deep well tools, good judgment of oil formations, energy and courage, no money, and little credit.

Doheny found where an old farmer had sunk a well near the banks of Kern river, that yielded a little oil on top of the water. On looking over conditions carefully, he was able to secure a lease on 320 acres of land, and set up his first derrick about one-fourth of a mile north of the old farmer's well. In a few days he had finished a well some 300 feet deep that would produce 10 or 12 barrels of 14 degrees gravity oil. This was proof to Doheny that his theory in regard to the field was right. Immediately he had an accident to the machinery and well, which it took several weeks to remedy, but when remedied and he was ready to start up again, he controlled a great part of the land for a mile wide and some four miles in length along the anticline; in fact, all that he could get on credit.

He finished 11 of these shallow light producing wells, then moved his machinery a half mile further north along the anticline; here he struck oil at about 600 feet of higher gravity, and that would yield over 50 barrels of oil daily, so he followed it back over the lands he controlled until it was thoroughly proved, the depth to the oil sand, its thickness, amount of oil it contained, and the amount that could be drained into one well so that the solid cubic oil contents of an acre of land could be as definitely determined as could the farmer's wheat crop when he begins his harvest, or the ore can be measured in a developed mine.

Other Fortunes Made. This not only made Doheny several times over a millionaire, but made other fortunes for other men. About the time Doheny began work in the Kern river field, Chas. Tibbets purchased a mortgage on a dry homestead of 160 acres for a debt of $80 and it proved to be in the direct line of development. He began leasing in small tracts of two, five and 10 acres, a bonus of $500 to $2500 per acre would be paid for a 10 year lease, besides a royalty of from one-fifth to one-third of the oil produced, thus besides getting several times as much for a single acre as the whole tract cost him as a bonus, he still got a third of the oil delivered in the tank, as fast as it was produced. It made Tibbets also a millionaire that can afford to support his private railroad coach and such other luxuries as his whim dictates.

company at $2.50 per acre, on time; he wanted it for a pasture, but before he had made a payment on it, oil development started by Doheny came his way. He sold leases so that the bonuses paid into his bank amounted to $1,250,000 before he paid the poor railroad company his purchase price of $1600 for a title. His royalties would now support a prince in splendor.

Canfield's Experience. The above history is of three of the many who made fortunes by having the courage to develop the Kern river oil field. Canfield, by the assistance of Chancellor, who furnished cash to move his rig to Coalingo, and work it the first three months, was also successful. Canfield and Chancellor were out of both cash and credit before they had finished their first hole. They had to shut down while Canfield went to Los Angeles to raise money to finish. Their indications for oil were promising, but for money with which to finish the work the reverse of promising. Finally, after some six weeks of begging men with capital to help them out on almost any terms, Dr. Hayward offered them $1800 for one-third interest in the entire outfit. Canfield's tools were worth $3500. Chancellor had put $3000 cash into the outfit, and both had spent several months on the hole which they were sinking.

As this was the best terms on which he could get money, Canfield accepted, but took an option on the one-third for a year at the price of $100,000. Canfield took the $1800 and went back to Coalingo to finish the well, a few days later bringing it in, with a flow of fifteen hundred barrels a day, of 41 per cent gravity oil, worth about $2 at the well.

Dr. Hayward received for his third of the oil sold, before Canfield bought his third interest, $90,000 and received as per terms of the option $100,000, all on an investment of $1800, and within one year. Canfield then sold the well to an English company for $3,000,000.

These incidents pale beside the recent development of the Lakeside well, across the valley from the Kern river field. The company which started this well exhausted both its cash and credit, and could go no further, then leased it to the Union Oil company, a strong concern, on one-eighth royalty, who, after working for some time, ordered the superintendent to abandon work on it, but wanting to see what was below the hard shale stratum in which the drill was at the time, the superintendent (though risking dismissal) piecemealed the order for a couple of days, and brought in one of the world's historic oil wells, which has been producing oil at the rate of nearly a million barrels of oil a month—one well making a million barrels every month.

The oil shot from this hole with sufficient force to tear to pieces and wreck the 84-foot derrick. There were three strings of castings in the well when oil was struck; the inner was blown out in a very short time, then the well began to shoot the larger castings out, one or two joints at a time, until now there is but little chance of capping the well, should the operators so desire.

There has been no attempt to control the well, as it was all that could be done to control the oil flowing from it. For six weeks any man that could handle a shovel was in demand at $1 an hour and given free board and free whiskey for as long as he would work on ditches and dams.

Some of the minor stockholders of the company who started the well and had to abandon it for want of cash or credit to complete it, now get as high as $400 a day income as their part of the one-eighth royalty which the Union Oil company pays them for the lease.
