"Polly," the Texas Ranger

(By S. J. Adams of Dallas, Tex.)

All night long we rode through the darkness. At daylight we dismounted and lay down upon our blankets to rest, and to await the night's friendly darkness to hide our movements from the men we sought, and while our horses grazed about us upon the green curly meadows so abundant in the chaparral country of the southwest in the early days, we could feel isolated and secure from all the world.

AMERICAN NATIONAL BANK. EL PASO, TEXAS. Confidence and Ability. The young man who has confidence in his ability to do things well is usually a good manager and gives others confidence in him.

Would you like to take a look? Would you like to read a few pages of a history which no other man will ever read? They look, and in spite of my protestation, he continued, "I was born in St. Mary's Parish, Louisiana. My father, an old southern planter, though greatly reduced in circumstances by the war between the states, is still considered well to do by his neighbors.

As I studied the man a change came over his face, and I saw him as I had never seen him before. The old reckless, grim, determined look I knew so well suddenly passed away; the face of the man was replaced by that of a boy, and with long eyes he looked out into space, as some devotee of art might gaze at a picture, the work of a master, or at some far away object elevated and unattainable.

"What is it, Polly?" I thoughtlessly asked. "To what do you refer?" said he, looking me in the eyes with the face of the ranger. "What were you thinking about?" said I. "Why do you ask, Shag?" said he.

Advantages of El Paso Life

Hello, Mr. Newspaper Man! What's the news? Fine and dandy! Election is over; it didn't bother us much, however, and we are getting along fine. But, will you allow me to say a word or so to confirm my former statement—namely, that very few people here realize the many important advantages of the El Paso Life? I will give you just one which arose last Friday. I already have a large number of agents out in other towns at work, but to give you one of a number of similar cases which have arisen: Two of my agents were in a certain town in Arizona and met a stock man. In course of their talk he said that he had a good ranch well stocked and about fifty thousand in cash which I wished to invest in real estate in El Paso or Los Angeles, where he expected to buy a home, move to and keep his family. Right there my agents realized the El Paso Life will have hundreds of paid advocates for El Paso and will cause many and many thousands of dollars to come to El Paso through insurance premiums and at the same time bring many more thousands here by just such occasions as the above! I tell you the El Paso Life will do wonders for El Paso and vicinity. Just think about this a little, then think of the improvements and the money now in Ft. Worth, in Dallas, in Houston, in Galveston, in San Antonio and Waco since (mind you) since the organization of Life Insurance in these cities. You see the life insurance written and premiums collected does much, very much, for the town, but not all. Then, if the Life Insurance Co.

is named for the town, as is the El Paso Life, it is all the better, because the agent must put up the best side of the town and vicinity, for it is business—everything to him. I tell you this because I think that a few people are overlooking something—we are seeing most of them, however—and getting a nice business right along. Good day. Come up to see me in Guaranty Trust Building whenever you can.
