VISITORS TO THE FAIR

We want to meet you while you are here

This week we expect lots of people from the surrounding territory with whom we have had business, but never met. We are anxious that they call at our office and make themselves known. We are also just as anxious to meet strangers. It may be that an investment in El Paso property will be considered during your trip to the El Paso Fair. If so

We Want to Interest You In

Grandview Addition

No suburban section of El Paso offers as attractive a proposition as Grandview. Its steady, substantial growth cannot be overlooked if you want to put your money in El Paso real estate that has the best future.

If There Were a Real Estate Department at the El Paso Fair and Exposition Grandview Addition Would Take First Prize

If the Fair Association had only included a Real Estate Department in their plans, and offered prizes for the most profitable business section and the most desirable residence section, there might be some difficulty deciding on the business property, but after a survey of Grandview's claims every judge would declare that she stood first in her class—head and shoulders above other contestants.

- You will agree with the judges when you know Grandview's advantages. It's easy to get to Grandview—there are two car lines, the Fort Bliss and the Highland Park. Grandview has none of the disadvantages of the down-town districts—none of the noise or the dirt or the crowded conditions. Grandview is supplied with electric lights, telephones, pure Mesa water. Finally, Grandview lots are easy to buy—a small payment down, a small payment each month.

One More Attraction For Fair Week.

While the Fair is the main attraction next week, there is one other that should not be overlooked. That is the beautiful quartered oak dining tables with buffets to match, that are being shown now at the El Paso Household Furnishing company's store on the corner of Stanton and Mills streets. This is a new shipment that has just been received and it is safe to say, without exaggeration, that it is the most high-class display of furniture ever shown in El Paso. There are some with the Vienna finish, others in Golden Oak, quite a few Mission patterns and several in Early English. Another piece especially noteworthy is the new combination buffet and china cabinet with the oval glass front and finished in Golden Oak.
