DR. COOK IS NOT SURE HE FOUND POLE

Explorer Says It Is a Region of Insanity and He Might Be Mistaken.

New York, N. Y., Nov. 30.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, in an article which he published in Hampton's Magazine, confesses that he does not know whether he reached the north pole or not.

Dr. Cook states that he will be impossible for any man to demonstrate beyond question that he has been to the north pole. He characterizes the region as a region of insanity, where one cannot believe the evidence furnished by his own eyes.

"Did I get to the north pole?" he continues. "Perhaps I made a mistake in thinking I did. Perhaps I did not make a mistake. After mature thought, I confess I do not know absolutely whether I reached the pole or not. This may come as an amazing statement, but I am willing to startle the world, if by so doing I can get an opportunity to present my case not as a geographical discoverer, but as a man."

Cook declares that at the time he convinced himself he had discovered the pole, he had spent two years in his quest, according to the editor of Hampton's magazine, "his sole desire is to make the people of the United States realize just what he went through during his two and a half years in the Arctic fastness and make them see what processes of thinking or lack of thinking it was that led him to do the thing which confirmed to the average man the worst suspicions against him."

Pearl Fails to Comment.

TO LET FOR WINTER: All benches west side San Jacinto plaza; also all other plaza benches in radius of shadow cast by new Mills building; reason, cold. Address Don Crocoddillo & Sister, agents, Alligator pool, plaza.

This advertisement might well appear, for the prestige gained in days past by San Jacinto plaza is on the wane. Modern business demands are responsible and, as in so many other instances in the great southwest, romance has been tramped upon and out-faded.

No longer may health seekers, indigent and otherwise, sit on the west side of the plaza on winter afternoons and bask in the sun, for it's too cold; for the same reason, they will no longer sit on the west side benches and watch women climb into street cars (now sunk) "When the Wintry Breezes Blow."

In the old days, San Jacinto plaza was famous over two republics for Veracruz to Bangkok, as the one always sunny spot in the United States, but

In his address last night, Mr. Balfour announced that in the event of victory in the approaching election he will be willing to submit the questions of tariff reform to a referendum.

The declaration was received with enthusiasm by the party, which thinks it will win votes in the north, where protection has not made the same headway as elsewhere.

Returned American, Famil- iar With Conditions, Tells of Chihuahua Situation.

Mexico City, Mex., Nov. 30.—It is persistently rumored here that Gen. Bernardo Reyes is to be recalled from Europe to become vice president, and later president of Mexico. This, it is believed, will quiet the present trouble.

DECLARES FEDERAL LOST SUNDAY FIGHT

A well known American who has just returned from the portion of the state of Chihuahua, Mexico, from which troubles with the insurrectionists are reported, gives some interesting information concerning the present insurrection and the discontent preceding it.

This man, who knows the country thoroughly and who is looked upon as thoroughly reliable, said in an interview:

"Revolutionary activity is felt throughout the state of Chihuahua. San Carlos, opposite Luján, Brewster county, Texas, and all of that vast territory lying between the Concho boundary and the Rio Concho has been in the hands of the opponents of the government since June 21, 1910. In fact when the mob put in Don Primitivo Estrada as jefe municipal, the state government confirmed his election and he has been in tranquil possession ever since, although the region may well be called a little dependent republic rather than a part of Mexico."

This territory covers over 200 miles along the Big Bend county of the Rio Grande, and through this region arms and munitions of war for the malcontents has been passing freely for at least two years. It is also through this country that the cattle and horse thieves operating on both sides of the river pass.

One Town Held by Government.

"The town of Ojinaga, opposite Presidio, is not in the hands of the insurrectionists because the position has no strategic value, and it is not an open port of entry. It is rather well guarded by rurales and mounted customs officers. Coyame, Cuachilla Parado, where Madero owns mines, Julimes, and San Pablo de Mique, are well in the hands of the revolutionists so that they practically control the entire division of the National railways of Mexico."

"West of this point and covering the northwestern part of the state the insurrectionists are in undisputed control of the present line of the Mexico North Western railway. Their strongholds begin at the Chubiscar dam three miles west of the city of Chihuahua where they control the city water supply. They are in possession of El Fresno, El Fortin, Palomas, Santa Isabel, San Andres, Bustillos, La Junta, Minaca, Bocoyna, on the Kansas City, Mexican and Orient railway, and Uruque, near the Sonora border. Guerrero, six miles north of Minaca and Temosachic.

Insurrection Are Massing.

"The concentration of insurrectionary troops is taking place and they are being drilled for prompt action, so that the insurrectionists also say that the movements that took place at Puebla, Torreon, Parral and other points were simply to force the government to distribute its army over a wide area where the soldiers could be reached by their agents. As it is well known that the Mexican army proper is composed partially of ticket-of-leave men from the penitentiaries of the country their loyalty can not be depended upon by the government. They have the option to serve in the army, the penitentiary or go to the insurrectionists. Outside of that fine body of men known as the rurales, Mexico will have no army if the insurrectionists are once allowed to gain one important and permanent victory. The government cannot get support outside of the cities and this only from the store clerks and some of the wealthy land owners are people close to the government."

"An effort was made by Don Juan and Don Alberto Terrazas to raise a troop of volunteers, and after five days of work they were able to organize the Chihuahua street cleaning

Reported That Diaz Intends to Put Him in as Presi- dent to Appear People.

Mexico City, Mex., Nov. 30.—It is persistently rumored here that Gen. Bernardo Reyes is to be recalled from Europe to become vice president, and later president of Mexico. This, it is believed, will quiet the present trouble.

CORRAL A VERY SICK OFFICIAL

It is said that Jose Ives Limantour, finance minister of Mexico, who has been in Europe for several months, will retire from the cabinet on his return to this republic. Reyes and Limantour are bitter enemies, and neither would consent to serve with the other in the official family of Mexico.

Gen. Reyes is now in Paris. He went to Europe after the Reysta trouble last year, at the request of president Diaz, and presumably on a government commission. The Reysta trouble resulted from the desire of his followers to see him made vice president in place of Corral. Some political rioting was indulged in, and at one time serious trouble seemed imminent.

If Reyes is recalled and made vice president, he will succeed Diaz as president of Mexico. It has been the general belief that in the event of Diaz's death he would return to Mexico to battle for the presidency. Reyes has a strong following and is popular with the army. As minister of war, from 1898 to 1904, he introduced many army reforms and increased the pay of officers and men. While he unquestionably lost prestige with some of his followers by not making a fight for the vice presidency, it is now felt generally that he acted patriotically in refusing to promote civil strife.

If Diaz decides to make Reyes vice president, Corral will resign and Reyes will be appointed to fill out the term. It is believed that such a course would be the best for Mexico.

Like Diaz, Reyes has an iron hand. He showed it in the early days of his administration as governor of Nuevo Leon. As president of Mexico, he could be depended on to preserve order.

QUIET REPORTED IN STATE OF CHIHUAHUA

All is quiet in the city of Chihuahua, according to passengers on Wednesday morning's National Railway train. No serious disturbances have been reported there since the battle Sunday. The Mexico North Western line, which runs westward into the territory held by the insurrectionists, has been opened for passenger travel, they say.

Ed. Gilbert, who came directly from Parral, reports no more trouble there. He says that a large number of soldiers arrived this week, but returned north, as they were not needed.

MEXICO IS BLAMED FOR THE SENSATIONAL REPORTS.

Mexico City, Mex., Nov. 30.—The situation has taken another turn in the capital, so far as the attitude of the press is concerned, and there is a tendency to lay the blame of the recent sensationalism upon the government, and to make, in an indirect way, a charge of censorship of the press against the authorities. Unable to get accurate news, the sensational press in Mexico printed the wildest exaggerations. Now this wing of the press would throw the blame on the government, claiming that it had no accurate information and was forced to depend upon such information as it could obtain. This is today the new development of the Madero situation.

HUNTERS FROM MARATHON HEAR SOUND OF FIRING

DECLARED THAT INSURRECTOS HAD PLANNED TO CAPTURE BOQUILLAS

Many of Them Reported in "The Big Bend" Country South of Marathon and Marfa, Where Activity Has Been Rumored and Where There Are Very Few Mexican Troops or Officials.

Marathon, Tex., Nov. 30.—A party of hunters from the river report heavy firing across the river in Mexico. They met many Mexicans going to the river who said the revolutionists would attack Boquillas, Mexico, shortly.

Boquillas is just across the river from the Texas side. A big fight south of the river in "the big bend" country would be no surprise here, as insurrectos have been reported as crossing the river into Mexico for several weeks, and there are no Mexican rurales or troops stationed there, and only a few civil officers, many of whom have already left.

ARMED CONFLICT FEARED AT TEXAS MINING CAMP

Alpine, Tex., Nov. 30.—Sheriff J. A. Walton and a number of deputies started out this afternoon by auto to go to the Chisos mines, 80 miles from here, where trouble is expected with armed Mexicans.

R. S. Dod, state surveyor, who is now at the Chisos mines, telephoned sheriff Walton that about 30 armed Mexicans are on this side of the border and that the people at the mines are very much excited.

It is believed that they are insurrectos, who were driven to this side of the border by the Mexican troops. It is said they fought yesterday. The miners believe it is the intention of the insurrectos to rob the company store.

The miners are heavily armed and are prepared to meet them.

BOMB UNDER SCHOOL CONDUCTED BY AMERICAN WOMEN

INGUADALAJARA, MEX.

Guadalajara, Mex., Nov. 30.—A dynamite bomb was found at the Institute Colon, a Methodist school in the western part of the city. This institution was attacked by anti-American rioters on the night of November 18, the building stoned and an iron and masonry fence wrecked. It is not known when the bomb was placed there. The teachers are American women and the pupils are exclusively Mexicans.

There has been no serious disturbance here since the anti-American riots of November 10 and 11. The city is again moving along at its accustomed pace. Plaza band concerts have been resumed, the theaters have reopened and bull fights are again being permitted.

When a revolutionary trouble was feared, the authorities posted notices to the effect that persons congregating in the streets would be warned by two angle blasts to disperse, and that in the event they gave no heed to the warnings, the troops would commence firing one minute after the second blast. These orders are still effective.

Madera, the Pearson lumber town in Chihuahua was cut off a week from the world because of the failure of the Chihuahua & Pacific trains to run between these two points. The food supply had got very short in Madera and the situation was rather desperate. The government was afraid to operate trains on this line because of the presence of the insurgents along the line who, it was feared, might blow up the train. It was while attempting to dislodge the insurrectos that the regulars were ambushed Sunday.

Telegrams were received in El Paso and Juarez Monday and Tuesday stating that there had been no train into or out of the town in a week, and that no news had been received from the outside world except that brought over the federal telegraph line and this was out of order a part of the time.

Today, however, the line was reported open again. The train was wrecked at San Andres vouchers for the truth of the report that the Maderites have received positive instructions not to molest Americans nor harm their property. The passenger was carrying a pair of expensive field glasses. When the train was wrecked one of the commanders of the insurrectos came up to his side and asked to see the glasses. Upon being shown them, he offered the American $100 for them. This offer was refused because the glasses belonged to a friend of the foreigner and he could not sell them. He fully expected the officer to take them by force, but he handed them back, stating that the instructions of the insurrectos were not to harm anything belonging to the foreigners.

Francisco Chavez, chief of the secret police, made two other important arrests. The men taken were Francisco Cebrada, who was arrested on Avenida Porfirio Diaz, and J. Trinidad Pimentel, who was captured in Santa Julia, a suburb of this city.

Incriminating documents, alluding them with the Madero forces, were found on both men, while each was armed to the teeth with modern revolvers and ammunition.

MANY DISTURBERS ARE PLACED IN PENITENTIARY.

Mexico City, Mex., Nov. 30.—The penitentiary of the Federal District opened its doors yesterday to a number of rioters from this city and from Pachuca, all of whom had first passed through an interview with Jesus Gonzalez Rivas, second chief of the secret police.

The men who became the guests of the government on account of their ice active participation in recent demonstrations are registered as follows: Victoriano Santiago Garcia, Benjamin Rodriguez, Nicolas Podocasky, J. Ventura Sanchez, Arturo Serrano, Francisco Noble, J. Loreto Salinas, Mateo Angeles, Eligio Rodriguez, Manuel Valdez, Marcos Garvan, Gregorio Barrios, Alejandro Meneses, and notary public J. Jesus Silva, the latter from Pachuca.

Francisco Chavez, chief of the secret police, made two other important arrests. The men taken were Francisco Cebrada, who was arrested on Avenida Porfirio Diaz, and J. Trinidad Pimentel, who was captured in Santa Julia, a suburb of this city.

Incriminating documents, alluding them with the Madero forces, were found on both men, while each was armed to the teeth with modern revolvers and ammunition.

Five steamer trunks filled with Winchester rifles and a handcar load of cartridges for these guns were said to have been shipped out of Juarez Sunday evening for the government forces at Chihuahua. The arms and ammunition were billed to the government at Chihuahua and were seen by an El Pasoan while being loaded at the Juarez station.

Modernity Divests El Paso Of One Of Its Institutions--The Plaza Lounger
Twelve-Story Mills Building Throws a Shadow Into the Park and Runs Them Out.
By G. B. Cady

TO LET FOR WINTER: All benches west side San Jacinto plaza; also all other plaza benches in radius of shadow cast by new Mills building; reason, cold. Address Don Crocoddillo & Sister, agents, Alligator pool, plaza.

The founder of the plaza did not reckon with the demands of El Paso's future citizens, for now, shortly after noon, the sun crawls behind the 12 stories of Mills' building and a cold, crawly feeling creeps down the spinal column of plaza loungers.

Gen. Mills Did It.

That Gen. Anson Mills did not think of the possible shadow effect when he let the contract for the 12 story building is more than probable, but if he did and purposes to annex the west side of the plaza, the coup d'etat is about the smoothest worked in these parts for some years, for as a winter assembly ground, the west side of the former sunny spot is not given serious consideration.

A time there was when the plaza was crowded with loungers during all the winter months, and back east they still tell you "to go to that little park across the street from the postoffice and you'll be sure to find Jim," or was the name Pauline? Anyway, such directions in the future will be about as valuable as a pocket edition of an American-Spanish dictionary to a tenderfoot, for neither Jim nor Pauline will journey to San Jacinto's plaza in winter afternoons. (Gee, it's cold.)

The Shadow's Radius.

Just how far the shadow will eventually extend is a matter of conjecture, but now it reaches to the Higginson pool early in the afternoon and the sun has not yet reached its southern route. Possibly by traversing the realm of known and unknown equations, and finding the value of X, the exact shadow extension might be ascertained, but after that the ability as it seems to tourists, of having a sun that persists in rising and setting at all points of the compass remains to be considered.

As a result of the shadow, the winter quarters of the allotagers are becoming frigid and Don Crocoddillo and less desirable, accustomed to rise late in the winter months, they will hardly have time to take the noonday sun bath before having to retreat, in deference to that shadow.

Wow, it's cold!
