Dancing and the Clothes Question

ONCE there was a girl so modest that she wore a mackintosh whenever she took her bath, and always undressed in the dark. There are people who cannot walk through a gallery of sculpture without blushing, and there are others who object on what they call moral grounds, to the dancing of beautiful women who prefer to wear simple clothes.

Why is it that men and women, familiar with the lovely forms of ancient and modern plastic art, familiar with the pure lines of the perfect human form through masterpieces of painting and modeling, should feel, or at least affect to feel, a shock to their delicate sensibilities at the sight of a woman's undraped great toe?

What is modesty anyhow? Doesn't it depend upon the motive, the act, and the circumstances? Doesn't it depend more than all else upon the point of view of the individual? Modest men and women are modest anywhere and everywhere—it is never a question of how many square inches of bare skin are exposed—clothes having nothing to do with it.

There is no doubt that a change is coming over the spirit of the people in this connection. As men and women become more natural they become more modest. It is the artificial restrictions and limitations that instill false notions and stimulate the imagination in wrongful excess.

Dancing is the earliest and most natural expression of all human aspiration and sentiment, all passions and woes, hopes and fears. It is at once inspired and inspiring; it expresses the thoughts and feelings, exalts the individual and excites or soothes the beholder.

It is not likely that there will be any luck about the house if there is no real wife there—no real weaver, and wife either weave men's fancies, or, like moths, feed upon them. Husband means the band of the house, but in many cases the wife is the "husband" who by prudence and thrift keeps the house together.

There are some houses in which it would be foolish to look for luck; at all events, the element of luck fights shy of many a house. Why will people persist in living amid offensive odors and badly ventilated houses, just to be near the store or the factory?

There was a terrible scandal. Furious Mrs. Maguet went to the police and accused her own husband, the local papers praised her loyalty to her late husband's memory and Monsieur Maguet was heavily fined.

UNCLE WALT'S Denatured Poem

POOR Socrates abandoned hope. They brought to him the hemlock dose, and said: "Take this, and swallow; and if a good four-finger drink should fall to put you on the blink, there's plenty more to follow."

DEATH OF SOCRATES. I want to say the law is just, and strictly on the level; for I, my friends, when I was loose, in monologues on things astruse, went to fairly revel.

Success Talks To Men and Boys THERE'S NO LUCK ABOUT THE HOUSE

IN a good old song the Scotchwoman sings, in anticipation of her husband's return home after a long absence, runs the line: "There's no luck about the house while the guld man's away."

THE WIDOW

By Guy De Termond.

"JEANNE," he murmured. His face was flushed. His excitement was intense. "Jeanne will you marry me now that you are a free woman?"

She looked at him tenderly and whispered: "I never forgot you, dear."

And thus it happened that the widow Chicard married Rene Haguet and the loving couple settled down in the little house on the corner of the square in Vicia-Pallas which the first husband of the bride had left her.

Though Isidor Chicard, while alive had never been in any way famous, his fellow citizens after his death remembered that he had been secretary of half a dozen learned societies, district physician and author of the Roman festivals in honor of Flora and member of the local town council.

In the heaven of bliss, in which she had lived since her second marriage, she had already forgotten the man whose wife she had once been, and whose death she had mourned so bitterly during their 10 years of married life.

Activities of Swindlers Keep Bankers Constantly on Watch

Raising and Forging Checks Continue To Be the Favorite Methods of Crooks.

THE banks are a particularly attractive field for the professional crook. Operations are possible which do not violate the letter of the law, but do infringe seriously upon the spirit of the law.

The crook who is particularly attractive to the banks is the one who is able to maintain a continuous working capital of at least $10,000. This scheme works perfectly as long as he and his confederates attend strictly to business.

It is comparatively easy for the professional swindler to prove an alibi. One of his favorite methods is to have a confederate go to a hotel and register in the name of the person the swindler will purport to be when he is passing his spurious paper.

Ada Patterson ON "THE ULTIMATE WOMAN."

THE cleverest woman novelist in America is writing a play for the stage and she proposes with that actress's help to show the woman of the future. Everyone interested in woman is trying to guess the riddle of that play.

A woman lawyer of New York said, with the calm of conviction, that all things are possible to the woman of the future. She says that woman will become great financiers. She believes that the United States at some remote time will have a woman president. And she adds that in that time of the supremacy of woman, women may make the proposals of marriage.

Yesterday at a reception I met a woman with soft brown eyes, dainty figure, beautifully frocked who was presented as a woman publisher. "The only woman publisher in America."

Whatever our personal angle on the riddle of the future, the woman of the future will be a mental forams and let us show the direction of the current of thought.

What is woman fast becoming? What will she become. Present indications are that she will be a woman of the future. Present indications are that women of the future will be intellectual independents. Their opinions will not be like the young pigeon's predigest food. Every case or set of circumstances in their lives will be tried at the bar of their own judgment.

Intelligent women are learning that their home duties, great duties and happy ones as they are, should not absorb them and they are learning to systematize their work that there is time for the club and reading; to so economize it that there is a little money for a bit of travel. The woman of the future will be a woman of the future.
