

Cures Health and Happiness

to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Scottville, Mich.—"I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I live on a farm and have worked very hard. I am forty-five years old, and am the mother of thirteen children. Many people think it strange that I am not broken down with hard work and the care of my family, but I tell them of my good friend, your Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no backache and dragging pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely ever without it in the house.

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls to build them up, regulate, and make them well. My eldest daughter has taken the Compound for painful, irregular periods, and it has always helped her. "I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for the Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies. I tell every one I meet that I owe my health and happiness to these wonderful medicines."—Mrs. J. G. Johnson, Scottville, Mich., R. F. D. 3.

When shown such positive and reliable proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound really does cure such cases wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering the same?

MORE GENUINE AND CONVINCING PROOF:

Elwood, Ind.—"I was sick three months and could not walk. I suffered all the time. I tried doctors, and they said I could not get well without an operation. I could hardly stand the pain, but my right side was the worse. I couldn't sleep at night, and I was troubled with a weakness.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me. I began to feel better when I had taken only one bottle, but I kept on until I was cured."—Mrs. Sadie Mullen, 2728 N. B. Street, Elwood, Ind.

What more proof can any one ask?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

MAGDALENA MINES MAKE IMPROVEMENT

Ozark Changes Mill—Tri-Bullion Resumes Development Work.

Magdalena, N. M., July 27.—The Ozark Mining and Milling company is commencing to make certain changes in the experimental mill. The company has vast bodies of complicated machinery, but so far has not been able to find a suitable process to treat it. When such a process is found it will construct a large mill.

The Tri-Bullion company is recommending development work on the shaft on the porphyry line or western contact. The boiler and belt from the Black Rock property are being moved and installed for this work. An electric hoist was formerly used. Large bodies of ore are expected to be found on this contact.

The Germany company is installing a large electric hoist in its big tunnel for the sinking of a deep winz.

The SKY PIRATE

By Garrett P. Serviss

Illustrated by Parker.

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

Capt. Alfonso Payton, the sky pirate, kidnaps Helen Grayman, New York's richest girl, and carries her away in his aeroplane, the Chameleon. He poses as commodore Brown.

She thinks her abduction is a practical joke. Payton takes her to his lodge in a Labrador wilderness. William Grayman, her father, secretly summons the police.

By wireless telephone Payton demands $10,000,000 ransom from Grayman, who agrees to meet him at Tribes Hill with the money. Grayman plans to trap the pirate.

Helen and her maid are well cared for by Payton, but are closely guarded by Indian John. Helen suspects that they are prisoners.

One after another Payton captures four police aeroplanes sent to trap him and kills several policemen before Grayman reaches the scene.

Grayman and police commissioner Braman reach Tribes Hill. Payton kidnaps Grayman, who again promises to pay the ransom.

Payton takes Grayman home. Helen receives a forged letter from her father, which reassures her. She replies to her father's letter.

Grayman fears Helen will fall in love with Payton. Secretary Grantham goes to government aid and assigns Lieut. Allan the task of locating Payton's lodge.

This Allan does by receiving wireless messages from Payton at New York and Buffalo with the aid of geometry and his new invention.

CHAPTER XI.

THE PIRATE'S LAIR LOCATED. THAT night we took the express for Buffalo, arriving in the morning, and Mr. Grayman conducted us at once to the office of Henry Garland, one of the great bankers of the town, who was in the Grayman combination and who had been notified by telegraph of our coming.

Mr. Garland was delighted to oblige the billionaire by giving him the exclusive use of his private office. In half an hour I had made all my arrangements, and again we waited. Payton was faithful to his appointment, and everything worked like a charm.

As before, my needle indicated every break in his talk and set itself while the waves were playing in a perfectly definite direction. The distance and bearing of Buffalo from New York being known, I now had all the elements of the problem in my hands, and it only remained to solve it on paper, the matter of a minute or two.

But the reader may be interested in knowing what was said by Payton and Mr. Grayman on this occasion. Payton opened by saying: "Good morning, Mr. Grayman. Helen and I have just been out catching a string of trout that it would do your eyes good to look upon. The dear girl becomes more fascinated with her surroundings here every hour, and really I am beginning to regret my agreement to exchange her society ever for so large a sum as $10,000,000. However, a bargain is a bargain, and I shall stand by my word."

"Well, well," replied Mr. Grayman. "I have heard enough of this. Are you ready to talk business?"

"Quite ready, Mr. Grayman. But to begin, let me warn you that I know all about your machinations, and I advise you in a friendly spirit to drop them. If you do not I shall refuse to part with Helen on any terms. Make no mistake about the place that I already occupy in her esteem. You can never arrest this if you let it go on longer."

Payton was playing his master card for all that he thought it worth. "What do you propose?" asked Mr. Grayman.

"I propose that you meet me with the money on Friday of this week on the top of a bare hill, which you will have no difficulty in recognizing, near Utica, N. Y. If any question should arise in your mind as to the precise locality you can recognize it by seeing the Chameleon hovering over the hill. If you prefer you can send forward a representative, keeping at a safe distance yourself. But you know what will be the result of any attempted trap. I will deliver Helen in exchange for the money."

Mr. Grayman pretended to hesitate, while he held a consultation with the secretary. "Friday of this week," said the latter. "It is now Wednesday. That gives us two days, which I think will be enough. I'm sure Allan must now have all the data he needs. Tell him you'll be there."

Mr. Grayman did so, and the pirate responded as usual. "Good!" adding, "Drop your game this time; I am ready for everything of that kind." And so the conversation ended.

The moment I appeared Mr. Grayman and the secretary eagerly demanded the result. "It's all right," I said. "I have now only a little figuring to do." And immediately I sat down to do it. The lines from Buffalo and New York, as indicated by the needle, were by no means so divergent as I had expected, but the angle was easily manageable. I made the necessary calculations, the result of which much surprised me. Without saying a word I went over my figures again, the two men leaning over my shoulder to breathless expectancy. At last, satisfied with the accuracy of my work, I called for a large scale atlas. One was brought and, opening the North American sheet, you should have seen the astonishment of the two men when I placed my finger on a point away up in Labrador and said, somewhat excitedly, "That's where you'll find your man; there's where your daughter is, Mr. Grayman!"

"Good heavens!" cried the billionaire. "Away off there! Are you sure?" "I'm not more sure that my head is on my shoulders. There can be no mistake about it, provided that you are sure that both communications came from the same point."

"I'll bet all I'm worth on that," said the secretary. "Then there's your man." And I pressed my thumb nail into the map. Then I made a little diagram like this:

"Here," I said, "is New York, and this line indicates the path of the waves received yesterday. Here is Buffalo, and this other line shows the path of the waves that have just arrived. Where these two lines intersect must be Payton's lodge and the place of Miss Grayman's imprisonment."

Suddenly the secretary turned to me and said, "How far do you make it to Payton's place?"

"It must be more than 800 miles in an air line from New York," I replied. "Yes, I should think it must be that distance. Now, our first, our imperative business is to see that Payton doesn't get away before we can descend upon him. They say that his aeroplane is very fast. She ought to be able to make 180 miles an hour."

"A hundred and forty, he told me," said Mr. Grayman. "That's mighty fast," returned the secretary. "I doubt if we have a fier in our fleet that could hold that pace."

"Yes," I said, with some pride; "the Eagle can do it at need."

The Eagle was my own aeroplane, and I had often tried her out for speed. "Good again," said Mr. Grayman, smiling at me very kindly. "Now, the speedier Payton's aeroplane is the better for our present purpose, because the less need he will have of making an early start for the rendezvous. If he can only a hundred miles an hour he could do the distance to Utica in six or seven hours; but, of course, he won't hurry. He need not start before tomorrow night, and probably he will not, because he will prefer to come on by night in order to run the less risk."

"That's what he did before," said Mr. Grayman. "All right, then," said the secretary. "We'll assume that that will be his course. But we have no time to lose. We must catch him before he starts. Fortunately, Allan, I have ordered your aeroplane and four other aeroplanes to be ready to leave Washington, fully armed and provisioned, on the receipt of a dispatch from me. I'll tell them to come on at once. Now, Grayman, you can go along or not, as you prefer."

"I'll go," said Mr. Grayman promptly. Mr. Grayman, in his dispatch, had the foresight to order the aeroplane to meet as at a little town, a considerable distance east of Buffalo, where Mr. Grayman and himself would run less risk of recognition. Accordingly, after a good meal we went by train to the designated place, arriving a little before 1 o'clock. As we descended from the train I was delighted to recognize the Eagle hovering over the little town. The four other aeroplanes were running about near, and a crowd had already gathered about the station and in the street, watching them.

"We'd better get aboard as quickly as possible," said Mr. Grayman. "Let's walk a little way up the hill, out of town, and I'll signal the aeroplanes to drop down for us."

In response to the signal two of the aeroplanes, the Crow and the Eagle, swooped down to the earth. My men were rejoiced to see me, and I to set foot once more on the deck of my beloved flier. She had her full complement, but the other was a little short, so I sent two men aboard the Crow to make room for the secretary and Mr. Grayman without weighting the Eagle too much. I wanted to have her in good running trim.

"Now, Lieutenant Allan," said Mr. Grayman as soon as we were aboard and a fly, "you are in immediate command of this fleet. I have ordered the commanders of the other aeroplanes to recognize you as their commanding officer and the Eagle as their flagship. I shall continue to advise you, but you will take charge of all technical details and give the orders. As the fliers are all duly armed and provisioned, there is nothing to prevent our making a start immediately!"

No one could have been more eager to start than I was. Instantly I ran up the signal to get under way, the others being instructed to follow my lead. Besides the Crow, already mentioned, there were the Osprey, the Bobolink and the Skylark, all, as I was glad to see, the best fliers in the service, although I believed that none of them could keep pace with the Eagle in a race.

The electric gun had already been invented, and each of the aeroplanes carried two of these terrible weapons, of a caliber of two and a half inches, one at the stern and the other at the bow. They fired either shells or solid shot. As everybody knows, the electric gun makes no report, but a sharp whizz is heard as the projectile leaves the muzzle. These projectiles at that time had an effective range of three miles, but when fired from an elevation they would often fall to earth at a distance twice as great. It was, therefore, necessary to be very careful in using them over an inhabited country, and we used always to run out over the sea for gun practice, employing unmanned balloons for targets. One of our aeroplanes could easily carry a hundred rounds of ammunition for each gun.

There was great competition among the gunners in marksmanship, and I had on the Eagle a Connecticut Yankee, Ethan Haight, who was practically a dead shot and a great favorite among the men. We carried no dropping bombs, like the navy serfs, but each had a stand of automatic rifles and pistols, besides cutlasses. The full complement was ten men, including the commander, the engineer and the steersman. On this occasion our entire flotilla carried thirty-eight fighting men, my own crew comprising only eight men, including myself, after I had made room for my two visitors.

There was a quick response to my signal to get under way, and in a few minutes, to the great admiration of the people below, the whole fleet, with its aeroplanes flashing in the sun, was speeding northward, the Eagle in the lead.

Wearing artificial hair is a harmless deceit of which many ladies are guilty. These women are all objects for sympathy rather than criticism.

Early neglect in the care of the scalp has caused the loss of so much hair that their personal appearance is sadly marred. To correct this defect they resort to artificial hair.

Most ladies would resent any imputation of personal carelessness and neglect. And yet very many women permit their natural hair to become so dull, brittle and lusterless that it looks no better than the artificial.

All this is an unfortunate as it is unnecessary. Hair that unsightly or thin may usually be attributed to the malevolent activity of the dandruff germ. This vicious germ burrows down into the hair follicle, shortly destroying its life. The hair becomes dead, loose and finally drops out.

There is a remedy sold by all druggists, the intelligent use of which will kill the dandruff germ. It also cleanses the scalp of all accumulations and makes the hair shine with the luster of life and beauty.

That remedy is Newbro's Herpicide, the Original Dandruff Germ Destroyer. This preparation in one dollar size bottles is sold and guaranteed everywhere.

Applications may be obtained at the best barber shops and hair dressing parlors. The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich., will send a nice sample and booklet to any address upon receipt of 10c in postage or silver.

The action of othine is really remarkable, for when applied at night, many of the freckles disappear entirely by morning, and the rest have begun to fade. An ounce is usually all that is needed, even for the worst case.

COULD NOT SLEEP WITH ITCHING RASH

All Over Baby's Body, Head and Face. Scratching Made Sores. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and Have Had No Further Trouble.

"On July 27, 1909, we left Boston for a trip to England and Ireland, taking baby with us. After being in Ireland a few days a nasty rash came out all over his body. We took him to a doctor who said it was chicken pox, and gave us medicine for him. The trouble started in the form of a rash and was all over baby's body, head and face, at different times. It irritated, and he would scratch it with all his might. The consequence was it developed into sores, and we were afraid it would leave nasty scars on his face.

"When we reached England we took baby to another doctor, who said his condition was due to change of food and climate, and gave more medicine. The rash got no better, and it used to itch and burn at night so bad that the child could not sleep. He was completely covered with it at different times. It was at this time that my mother advised us to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment for about nine months the places disappeared. There are not any scars, or other kind of disfigurement, and baby is completely cured by the Cuticura Soap and Ointment."
