ADVERTISING MEN GATHER AT DALLAS

Welcomed to the State by Governor Colquitt; a Great Parade.

Dallas, Texas, May 20.—Advertising men from all parts of the state reached Dallas today, each delegation coming with some startling variety of music or decoration, in honor of the press men and the importance of the particular town from which each hailed.

It was the signal for the beginning of the annual meeting of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America. Prior to the parade there were welcoming addresses by Governor Colquitt and Mayor Holland. At a second business session reports of committees were heard and advertising men told of improvements in their methods of work.

Dallas Schneider, in an address on "the organization needs of retail advertising," said the great and glaring fault of most big retail advertising is inefficient administration due to insufficient expenditure for organization.

"Three kinds of retail advertising organizations to my mind seem necessary," he said.

"First, proper organization and an appreciation of the sphere of the advertising department of America's big stores.

"Second, organization of the retailers in each community for the purpose of working with the national advertisers for mutually profitable results through national campaigns in local newspapers.

"Third, organization of the small retailer or specialty shops to give him as good an advertising service as his big and overshadowing department store competitor."

The membership of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America has increased nearly 70 per cent in the last year, president George W. Coleman said in his annual speech.

REGISTERED MAIL STOLEN AT CLOVIS

Santa Fe Baggage Room Is Entered and Mail Pouches Taken.

Clovis, N. M., May 20.—The Santa Fe baggage room was broken open here early this morning and all letters and registered mail stolen. Two pouches were recovered by George Roach, an employe of the Santa Fe, who reported to the sheriff's department that the third pouch, containing 75 pounds of first class mail, still is missing. The sheriff and Santa Fe detectives are working on the case, but no arrests have been made.

EL PASOAN WINS TEXAS GOLF MEDAL

Dallas, Tex., May 20.—C. H. Leavell, of El Paso, was elected vice president of the Texas Golf association at its meeting after the conclusion of the tournament Saturday afternoon. E. R. Spotts, of Houston, was made president. The El Paso golfer also won a medal for runner-up in the Dallas cup contest. George V. AMUSEMENTS

THE BIJOU.

"Into the jaws of death rode the six hundred." Today, at the Bijou, Tennessee's immortal poem will be exhibited in picture form. The title of "The Victoria Cross." The Vitagraph company is the producer of this fine feature and that alone is sufficient proof of its excellence. Exhibitions are continuous from 5 to 11 p. m.

AT THE EL PASO THEATER.

Beginning tonight and continuing throughout the week, starting Wednesday, the World's Fair Stock company will present at the El Paso theater "Paid in Full." In this bill Miss Myrtle Vane will be seen in one of her greatest emotional parts. In this part Miss Vane as Emma Brooks, reaches that sublime height where a woman sacrifices all for her husband's business honor. Mr. Leyton, for the first time takes the role of the villain—a villain of the deepest dye. Dalaty Mand Morrow and the full strength of the World's Fair company are all aptly cast. The bill promises to be one of the best offered by this company.

Owing to the school exercises on Wednesday, there will be no performance by the company on that day. There will be matinees Saturday and Sunday at popular prices—10c and 20c. The night prices are 25c, 50c and 75c. Tickets are on sale at Ryan's.

AT THE AIRBORNE.

Jas. P. Lee and his company have returned to the Airborne and manager Foggy says "they will furnish fun and frolic to El Paso." All of the old favorites including the star, Baby Angelus, are in the cast. This is the troupe which played 15 straight weeks in El Paso last summer and on the last night of their engagement broke all records. New music, new dances, new wardrobe and the bill, "The Widow O'Brien," will provide the entertainment tonight. Manager Foggy says, come early and get your seats, for this troupe is sure to have the standing room sign out early in the evening. Tickets are on sale at Ryan's drug store. Prices 25c and 50c; 50c for box seats. The real troupe is here.

The Law When a Dog Bites You

AFTER you have paid a quick visit to the Pasteur Institute and have recovered physically, you will turn your attention most likely to the question of your ability to recover damages from the owner of the dog that bit you. Who is liable for the damage you have sustained?

The law on this subject is very clear, although the principles involved are sometimes misapplied even by judges. Primarily, the owner of an animal is liable for whatever damage it does if he has been guilty of the slightest negligence in maintaining it.

This rule is modified, however, in the case of ordinary domestic animals, such as horses, dogs, cats, cows, etc. In the case of such animals the owner is liable only if (1) the animal was of a vicious disposition, and (2) he had knowledge of the evil propensities.

The first thing to do is to ascertain whether the dog was really of a vicious disposition. Inquiries of the neighbors will usually elicit this information. Then you must prove that the owner knew of the animal's evil character.

The requirement that a person injured by a dog must prove that the owner knew the dog was vicious has led to the oft-repeated fallacy that "every dog is entitled to one bite." As a matter of fact, however, if your dog is vicious and you know it, you are just as liable for the first injury he inflicts as for subsequent injuries. The error with regard to this point has developed from the fact that in order to prove the owner's knowledge of his animal's vicious propensities it is usually possible to prove that the animal has misbehaved itself before, from which the inference has been unwarrantably drawn that unless you can prove that the dog has bitten some one before, you can't recover damages—in other words, "the dog is entitled to his first bite."

But the owner's knowledge of his dog's dangerous temper may be shown in many other ways. Thus, it would be quite permissible to show that you yourself had warned the owner of his dog's viciousness, or you might be able to prove that the owner had warned his own family not to go near the animal. The fact that a dog is usually kept muzzled or chained is admissible evidence on the point, and so, too, the fact that the dog was in the habit of running out and snapping at passers-by.

Where, by teasing an animal, you bring the injury upon yourself, you cannot recover damages even though you can show that the dog was of a vicious disposition and that the owner knew it, nor is the owner liable for injuries which his dog inflicts upon a trespasser.

But if you enter a man's domain in a proper manner upon a legitimate errand you are not considered a trespasser, even though you had no express permission or invitation to be there, and if you are injured by a vicious dog under such circumstances and can prove that the owner was aware of his propensities, you may recover damages for your injuries.

Where a man owns a dog which he knows to be vicious, it is his duty to keep the dog under such restraint that injury cannot come to those who legitimately enter his premises. Merely putting a "Beware of the Dog" sign above the animal's kennel will not relieve him from liability unless the person injured disregarded the sign and thus brought the injury upon himself.

Nor is it any defense for the owner of a vicious dog to show that he kept the animal chained up if the chain be long enough to enable the dog to reach passersby. In other words, the owner of a vicious dog must take such precautions as to make it impossible to injure others, or he will have to answer for the consequences.

The safest course for the owner to follow when an animal shows vicious tendencies is to get rid of it at once instead of trying to keep it under restraint.
