DEMOCRATS OF ARIZONA SPLIT OVER RADICALISM OF THE GOVERNOR

Their first step in that direction was the selection of John J. Birdno, of Graham county, for chairman of the state central committee.

What Will Be Effect of Row. The effect of the present row within the ranks of the Democrats, upon the political future of those now in power, can only be guessed at, but it is thought to be a safe guess that the next state election, two years hence, will see a new lineup at the primaries.

Wilson's Attitude. In the first place the attitude of Mr. Wilson, the Democratic candidate for the presidency, toward the initiative, the referendum and particularly the recall, the three cardinal principles of Arizona progressivism, has had rather a chilling effect upon Arizona progressives, and they are not as enthusiastic over him as they were over the constitution and Mr. Hunt a year ago.

Republicans Confident. So far as the Republicans are concerned, the leaders of the party throughout the state are confident that Mr. Taft will poll not only all the votes polled by Ed Willis when he ran for governor last fall, but thousands of stay-at-homes who will come out this year to cast their first presidential vote.
