Buy and Build In Golden Hill

Golden Hill is El Paso's choicest close-in residential section. Located on the benchland overlooking the city and valley with Mexico in the background, the Golden Hill addition is rapidly being recognized as the ideal place for business men who must catch their cars at regular intervals and who wish to live out of the congested district without going too far into the country. Because of its elevated location the health conditions in Golden Hill are the best and the living is worth while up there on the hill away from the dust and smoke and noise of the city.

Quick to recognize this, home seekers are flocking to Golden Hill and are building substantial homes on the terraces of this beautifully laid out addition. Homes are springing up on every block of the highland suburb and contracts have been let for almost as many more homes as have already been built there this year. The Arizona street car line will probably be extended soon through the heart of Golden Hill. Already it runs to the front gate of the addition.

Building in Golden Hill has been rapid during the present summer and fall. The chalet home of J. G. McNary has been completed this year and is now occupied as a home by Mr. McNary, being one of the finest residences in the city. This house was built by Austin & Marr and afterwards purchased by Mr. McNary when it had been completed. A number of other houses, ranging in cost from $5,000 to $10,000, have also been built by Austin & Marr in Golden Hill and sold after they have been completed.

Now Is the Time To Buy Golden Hill Lots at the present low prices. Less than three blocks away lots are selling at three times what we are asking.

BITTER WAR WAGED BY ARTISTS

Paris Art Center Is Torn With Dissension Between New and Old.

RADICAL GROUPS GET GREATEST NOTORIETY

Paris, France, Nov. 2.—An artistic struggle being waged in France has become even more bitter since the opening of the autumn salon. Not only are the painters fighting among themselves, but also the critics, and to a certain extent, the public.

Unlike the spring salon, the autumn exhibition of the fine arts is always more or less controversial by the very nature of its contributions. Of the 39 American artists represented—15 of whom are women—practically none comes under the more severe condemnation of the French critics. Of the South Americans, of whom there are perhaps half that number, several partake a little of the extremely radical variety. But even their products do not justify the inclusion of the western hemisphere in the realm denoted by the critics as of "the outer darkness of barbarism."

Out of more than 600 artists exhibiting, perhaps 20 fall within the terms of the censorship. The fact remains, however, that public curiosity at the works of the 30 has drawn more patronage than any legitimate interest in the creations of the more conservative.

More Exciting Than Last Year. This year the presence of an unusually large number of works by three leading modern radical camps—just impressionists, cubists, and futurists—has made the event even more exciting than it was last year. As a matter of fact, only a small proportion of the works of painting or sculpture exposed are by men belonging to these schools, although their eccentric canvases and statues get the lion's share of attention from visitors. The best critics of the old school, writing in such newspapers as "Le Temps" or "Le Figaro," attribute a new reason for the "madness" of the three schools. It is that the men who are painting these queer works in Paris now are not Frenchmen, blessed with the excellence of a strict academic education, locally derived, but barbarians from the great outer darkness of Poland, Little Russia, Bohemia, Hungary, Norway, Finland, Siberia, and so on. Their too sudden immersion into the artistic atmosphere of Paris gives

JEALOUSY IS CAUSE OF A SLAUGHTER

Unsuccessful Suitor Starts a Riot in Portugal Town and Troops Are Called Out.

SEVEN ARE KILLED AND 20 ARE WOUNDED

Lisbon, Portugal, Nov. 2.—A scene of jealousy occasioned the calling out of a regiment of cavalry, a battalion of infantry and the entire police force and resulted in the killing of seven persons and the wounding of 20 others in the streets of Oporto.

A well known and wealthy local merchant had a few weeks ago married a rich and beautiful woman. While walking on one of the principal streets of the city he met an unsuccessful suitor for his wife's hand. Hot words passed between the two men, quickly followed by blows, and revolvers were drawn. Meanwhile a number of friends of the two men had come up. In all some 200 persons assembled around the two disputants. Sides were taken and a regular pitched battle ensued, arousing the city.

Troops on Police. The governor turned out the whole police force and directed them to the battlefield, but at their appearance the two parties joined forces and turned their weapons upon the police, who were completely routed, leaving two killed and six wounded on the ground.

The 25th infantry regiment and the Seventh cavalry were then called out. The soldiers surrounded the combatants and after a short resistance scattered them in all directions. The troops riding hard at their heels. Eighty people were arrested. Excesses Cause Worry. The growth of clandestine emigration from Portugal is causing considerable anxiety to the Portuguese authorities and it is understood that the Portuguese government will shortly denounce the Hispano-Portuguese convention of 1897 for the suppression of the traffic. The measures taken by the Spanish government, it is claimed, are totally inadequate to stop this traffic, which is proving a serious drain on the agricultural population. Labor contractors from Fuentes d'Onoro, Vico and Cedis freely engage Portuguese laborers who are shipped off to North and South America. It is declared, with the tacit consent of the Spanish authorities, in total disregard of the provisions of the convention, all complaints from the Portuguese government passing unheeded. The result of this traffic is that

FIGHT IS MADE ON FAKE AUCTION ROOMS

There, although the crowds inside the rooms showed that that has been far from being the case. The story is that the mayor passed one of the Broadway places on his way to the theatre recently and was struck by its "fakey" air that he ordered an investigation. The articles put up for sale, curious cheap "art works" and the like, are of course practically worthless, and a crowd of hangers on who are in the employ of the managers, usually visitors from out of town, though a surprising number of New Yorkers have "hit" and reported in silence as usual.

CRACKED. Sophie, after scrutinizing her new sister for several moments, discovered deep creases in the flesh of her fat little wrists and neck. "Mamma," said Sophie earnestly, "we don't want her; she's cracked. We must exchange her right away."—The Delinquent.

Portuguese emigration to the two American continents which a short time ago averaged only 30,000 to 40,000 annually, has now increased to over 70,000, and the country districts, especially in the north, are threatened with rapid depopulation.

Bulls Attack Motor Car. The famous fighting bulls of Portugal displayed their aversion to motor cars recently when an automobile omnibus with ten passengers was proceeding along a country high road near Cintra, Portugal.

A herd of fighting bulls from a celebrated breeder's establishment suddenly appeared around a corner, frightened by the throbbing of the engine, the bulls got out of hand and charged down on the vehicle. The driver hastily turned his machine around and pursued by the herd of infuriated animals, but being ignorant of the neighborhood he drove the heavy conveyance over a precipice into a ravine 80 feet below. The driver and three passengers were killed outright, while the others were all seriously injured.

POLITICAL FIGHT MAY BE REPEATED

to throw the election into the house, and had New York, Indiana and Michigan remain in the Republican column, such would have been the case. But the Democrats were not worrying about that prospect, since the landslide in 1930 had made the house Democratic on a presidential ballot as well as on a count of individuals.

The Republicans' difficulties increased so rapidly as to remind the party leaders that misfortunes never come singly. The wage earners in the Homestead steel mills, who were claimed as the beneficiaries of the McKinley tariff on iron and steel products, were so dissatisfied with their relations with Carnegie, Frick and other owners of the mills, that they voted a strike. The mill owners hired a force of Pinkerton detectives and a pitched battle was fought. The trouble went on, and constituted the answer of every Democratic orator to the claim of the Republican spellbinders that the tariff brought prosperity to the workingman.

Harrison's Defeat Declined. The election was a hard-fought one, but when the returns came in they showed a popular plurality over Harrison of nearly 400,000. Only two presidents in the history of the country have won before the people three times and when time received more votes than any of his competitors, Cleveland carried the country on a popular vote in 1884, 1892 and 1896, increasing his lead each time. Andrew Jackson got the popular verdict in 1824, 1828 and 1832.

Only a few long-headed political leaders like Quay foresaw the defeat of Harrison. Their ability to forecast accurately arose from the fact Harrison had incurred their enmity and stood them on the fence, where they could view the outcome with indifference and prevent the wish from influencing the result. The election of 1852 witnessed the breaking of faith by one elector. North Dakota was then casting its first vote and the three electors, seeing that Cleveland had such a large majority, split their vote—one for Cleveland, one for Harrison, and one for Weaver. They had been elected by a very close margin, so that one Republican elector got it. The other two had been on a fusion Weaver ticket, but one voted for Cleveland.
