Advertising and Canvassing.

By W. C. Kenney.

Advertising has probably done more to foster the habit of systematic savings than any other one factor.

Banks in this country have been advertising have induced thousands of people to open savings accounts and to systematically add thereto.

The savings habit once formed leads to the reading of advertising along other lines, for your savings bank depositor is keen to discover ways which will permit him or her to increase the bank balance.

There are those who actually deposit each month the difference between what they expected to pay for articles and the amount they bought them for when advertised at special prices.

Then there are those who, with a given sum as working capital, keep close watch of the advertisements appearing on the "Want" page and by judicious investment turn this capital again and again—crediting the profits to their savings accounts.

More hoarding of money isn't the object of savings. One should save to know the value of money—to have the money ready when opportunity offers a reward to the person with ready cash.

More reading of advertising to save a penny here and a dime there on the cost of an article is not getting the true value of the advertisements. One should keep advertising for the liberal education it affords, for the better ways of living it makes possible, as well as for the time-saving and money-saving opportunities it presents.

AN ORGAN RECITAL.

At the meeting of the Ladies' Aid society it took some time to get down to business. Mrs. Wiggins told of her recent operation for appendicitis, and Mrs. Higgins and Mrs. Higgins had reminiscences of similar experiences.

At last a lady rose to go. "I thought," she explained to her hostess in the hall, "that it was to be a business meeting, but I find it is an organ recital!"—New York Times.

LOSES DIAMONDS WHILE IN BATHTUB

New York Diamond Salesman Sees Gems Sweep Down Drain—Engineer Recovers Them and Returns Present.

Los Angeles, Calif., Nov. 9.—Max Levy, a New York diamond salesman, stated to friends here today that gems of his valued at $25,000 had been lost through a drain in a bath tub yesterday, to his temporary great mental anguish.

He would not trust them even to the safe in the hotel where he was a guest. He carried them in a small chamois bag about his neck, even when bathing, which he was doing when the string supporting the bag broke and the diamonds disappeared through the drain.

Levy dashed down four flights of stairs and told his troubles to the hotel clerk. An engineer soon recovered the diamonds for Levy, who presented his rescuer with a diamond pin.

DOG TAX AND CLEAN JAIL FOR JUAREZ

Juan N. Medina, while waiting for the acceptance of his resignation which will permit him to run for mayor of Juarez in the elections next month, is preparing for the collection of a dog tax for the first time in Mexico. Juarez always has been overrun with dogs. Mayor Medina is busy arranging a proper sort of dog tag, for which six pesos will be charged yearly, and a Juarez dog catcher will be appointed to eliminate unregistered pups.

The Juarez jail is undergoing a thorough renovating. Whitewash in profusion is being plastered on the walls of the cells and in the jail patio, a new cook stove is installed and the drainage system of the jail is being modernized.

The road running from Juarez to the Juarez Agricultural college, to the east of town, is being repaired and many chuck holes filled with gravel.

QUEER WAYS OF BUGS.

I wonder about the little bugs that keep so still all day.

And only just begin to sing When the children stop their play!

I feel so sorry for them all. It does not seem quite right To make so many little bugs Sit up and sing all night!

MISSING SAMPLE.

A traveling salesman wishing to have some fun with an old negro sitting on a soap box in a small store in Virginia, asked if Smith's store was on the right left-hand side of the road. The old negro looked up and asked: "Is you a salesman?"

"Yes," he replied, "I am selling brains."

The old man with an air of disgust answered: "You is the first salesman I ever seed who doesn't carry any samples."—Exchange.
