Movement Started in Tularosa Expected to Result in Two Elections.

Alamogordo, N. M., March 30.—The movement to hold an election on prohibition in Otero county now appears to be well organized and energetically directed. The laws which govern the holding of such elections, do not permit the inclusion of incorporated towns at the time that the other precincts of a county are voting, owing to this provision, three different plans are now clearly defined.

THE THREE PLANS.

The first was the circulation of petitions asking the county commissioners to authorize an election in all the precincts of the county, with the exception of the incorporated town of Alamogordo. It is said by one of the principal workers in the prohibition cause that at least two-thirds of the qualified voters of Tularosa have signed the petition calling for the election. Tularosa has been regarded as the hardest in the county to put into the dry column.

The second plan is the circulation of a petition in Tularosa, asking for a vote on the question of incorporation of Tularosa only. The prohibition workers declare the anti-prohibition people are behind this petition, for the reason, the prohibitionists would be the hardest to get into the county to carry in the election, while the anti have hope that they could defeat the issue in Tularosa.

Expect Election Order.

The county commissioners will be in regular session next Monday, and the trustees of the town of Alamogordo, in regular session next Wednesday, when it is expected, the two bodies will be called upon to vote on the question of incorporation of Tularosa. The law provides that an election to prohibit shall not be held within 60 days of any other election. Thus it will be impossible for the Alamogordo election to be held earlier than June 15, the date of the election of officers and the vote on the bond issue being held here on April 4. There are no other elections throughout the county which would cause a postponement of the county election.

William A. Brubaker, of Chicago, one of the national prohibition speakers, is expected to arrive in Alamogordo Saturday, to conduct a rally. The people who are behind this prohibition campaign are practically the same as those who were behind the crusade which resulted in the closing of Alamogordo's one "red-light" house, the so-called "dobe saloon," on April 29.

$200 STOLEN AT THE POSTOFFICE

The robbery was discovered shortly after the man withdrew his arm, and postal clerks and city detectives were notified. A description of the man was not obtained, so hurried was his getaway, and a sharp watch is being kept in an effort to locate the thief.

The bills were lying within easy reach of anyone standing on the outside of the small window, which is kept open during the rush hours of the day. The other half of the window is protected by grillwork, making it impossible to reach through to the drawer without being detected.

PYTHIAN SISTERS GIVE ENTERTAINMENT UNIQUE, IN AID OF THE ORPHANS

MATTICE TEMPLE, Pythian Sisters, gave a very successful and pleasing presentation of the "Magic Mirror" Wednesday night in the Knights of Pythias hall in the new Lanier building. The entertainment was for the benefit of the fund for the orphans, which is maintained by the order.

Mrs. Mattie Hoyt was the magician. She was attired in a gown of white, with a silver veil and carried a golden wand by which she invoked the images in the magic mirror of girls of a variety of types and styles, from which the bachelor, acted by U. S. Goss, was to make his choice.

Miss Greta Palmer played a piano accompaniment to the pictures through the program and C. H. Wilchar was the reader. The first girl to appear was Miss Irene Lanning at the society queen. She was attired in a court gown of white satin, trimmed with opalescent beads. Her long court train hung from a Medusa collar of lace ornamented with brilliant. She wore a band of brilliant about her brow. As the bachelor's unpaid admirer will remember, Mrs. Ethel Atkinson, appeared. She was most eccentrically attired in a tight fitting basque and oddly made skirt, an old poke bonnet, and a pair of plumes of various colors and her hair was done in corker-curly curls.

A belle of the ante bellum days then appeared, Miss Frances Foster, dressed in the quaint hoop skirted gown of that period, with black lace mitts and a black lace poke bonnet. Following her came the gay ballroom belle, Miss Edwina Bigelow, gowned in white satin, with a handsome lace overdress and a net hat. The next to appear was Miss Marian Fullman, dressed in a gown of white and pink, with a handsome lace overdress and a net hat. The next to appear was Miss Edna Blaine, dressed in a gown of white and pink, with a handsome lace overdress and a net hat.

The demure Pythian maiden came next, impersonated by Mrs. Ethel Appleby. She was gowned in the typical Puritan gray, with the white cap, kerchief and apron. As she looked to the meek to please the bachelor, the next girl summoned by the magician was Miss Edna Blaine, dressed in a nobby riding habit of very mannish style.

Following her came the woodland nymph of spring, Miss Rosemary Welsh, attired in a Grecian tunic of white, with her hair hanging and a wreath of pink apple blossoms about her head and shoulders. She carried a basket of fruit and a branch of apple blossoms in her arms. The idealist for the bachelor, she passed on to make way for the practical home making maid, who was Miss Flora Malone, armed with broom and dustpan and wearing a dust cap and a big bangalore apron.

This was too unromantic for him, so next was brought in the dainty brunette, Miss Julia Bigelow, dressed in an evening gown of blue, with a blue hat. The quakeress, Mrs. R. O. Clark, in her prim, sand colored gown followed her, and then came the college girl, student of wisdom, Miss Vivian Pomeroy, attired in cap and gown with her arms laden with books. "Too much of a high brow" for him, the magician then brought forward the rosy-cheeked debutante, Miss Reulah Brown, who wore an evening gown of good colored tulle trimmed with gold lace. Still the bachelor was not satisfied; so the trained nurse, then appeared, acted by Mrs. R. W. Fort, wearing the regulation nurse's costume.

Then came the fascinating widow Miss Anne Hughes, dressed in an evening gown of black covered with iridescent beads and black jet ornaments. She carried a director's staff and lavender tuques, as the strong, the bachelor still displeased, the musician brought a Japanese maiden, Miss Amy Hitchens. She wore a handsomely embroidered Japanese costume of yellow, with the little Japanese slippers and parasol and her hair was characteristically ornamented with small fans.

As the bachelor distained a foreign bride, the Japanese girl passed on and was succeeded by the artist, Miss R. M. Auger, wearing a painter's work smock and carrying a large palette and brushes. Afraid of being used for a model, the bachelor was still undecided, but to the next girl, the blonde, Miss Willie Mae Caron, he capitulated completely.

Miss Caron wore a gown of white tulle fastened with flowers of pink and made in the panier style. This was the first part of the program. After an imaginary lapse of 20 years, the man reviews again the procession of girls, but this time the smiles of the blonde did not avail and he decided upon the domestic home keeping maid with her broom and dust pan.

During the intermission between the two parts of the program, Miss Greta Palmer played a piano solo, the prelude from "Mignon," by Thomas, Mrs. J. J. Kaster sang, accompanied by Miss Palmer. Her selection was "Night," by Harriett Ware.

Following the program, the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing. A pleasing feature was a fancy solo dance, performed by Miss Frances Foster, with Mrs. H. W. Austin playing her dance music.

The entertainment was attended by a good sized crowd. Mrs. Carl Lee Smith was the general chairman in charge of the program. Mrs. Henry Alexander was in charge of the tableaux with the High School. Mrs. Jesse Daily operated the curtains. On the committee in charge of the arrangements were Mesdames Matilda Burroughs, Frances H. Scotten, H. E. Brown and W. R. Weeks. Life Irrigating. I mentioned Gasoline Engines on Tuesday. There are two other factors in irrigating. All the ditches must be sound around your source of supply. Then you start to fill your near tableau; when that is filled, then the next more distant one, but you have a bad time with the second unless the borders of your first are strong. If the borders break you face and rush about mending breaks and never really get the water where you wish it. Christian work is sure clear. There are three factors: (1) The Pump, (Ourselves), (2) The near tableau. (Our city), (3) The distant square. (Other lands). The most important factor is ourselves. MILES HANSON.
