

Beauty Chats By Edna Kent Forbes

Use Of Hot Drinks.

THE woman who is trying to improve her looks knows that quite frequently beauty is gained by little things.

A cup of coffee, taken before rising, will often start you off feeling brighter and fresher.

Sometimes a brief rest will do wonders, sometimes even a hot cup of tea or coffee is all that is needed to transform a worn out looking woman to one who looks fresh and fit.

Questions and Answers. Mrs. W. E. B.—Send me a letter with a self-addressed stamped envelope enclosed and I will send you a recipe for the hair and also for the flesh building cream.

HOROSCOPE

Thursday, February 28, 1918. ACCORDING to astrology this is a most favorable day, all the influences being read as stimulating and encouraging.

The stars seem to encourage trade and especially initiative in new lines of commerce.

This should be a fortunate day for all who go to sea, and warning is given to make the most of every auspicious way.

Today should be most profitable for all who deal in oil or oil products, but the same planets that smile on commerce that profits by petroleum also promise a substitute which will seem as miraculous as the turning of water into wine.

This is an auspicious day for all who seek the favor of persons in high place and there will be vacancies much coveted before the summer.

Under this rule of the planets, which is supposed to accentuate energy and egotism, warning is given that danger will lurk where persons are not on their guard.

Again it is prophesied that 1918 will be marked by surprise of every sort. Sensational occurrences will become common as the tardy spring advances.

All the influences seem to focus good and bad conditions for women in other words, they will experience the greatest extremes.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the sugar of a success in high place and they will be successful in their undertakings.

Children born on this day are likely to be generous and trustworthy. Many future statesmen come under this sign.—Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

WHIZ-Z! BANG!

What! Are those lovely posies for me, Ralph? Why, how sweet of you! I just think you are the dearest boy Thank you, so much Ralph.

Spring is near

Just as the "pop-pop-pop" of the guns at the front or the steady boom—the barrage fire—presages a severe attack—an attack in force by the main body—so there is a general feeling of apprehension, dullness, the "blues," giving notice of a coming uric-acid attack—a fear of something going to happen; headache, vertigo, high-colored, over-acid urine—and something does happen! Nature is simply giving warning that there's going to be an uric-acid "explosion."

DAWSON, TEXAS.—"For the benefit of others, I gladly give this statement regarding the merits of Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. Am nearly 78 years of age. I suffered from backache, weak back, rheumatism and could not control the kidneys. I can safely say that 'Anuric,' the new discovery of Dr. Pierce, has done me more real good than anything I have ever taken for these ailments."—Mrs. N. M. Flint.

Daily Novelette

THE SPOOK GLEN ROBBERY.

SHERLOCK BONES, the great detective, sniffed a little catnip and settled back in his chair, when there entered a woman of middle age followed by a man who was obviously her husband.

"A-ha, two or three times!" murmured Sherlock. "Here is a mystery worthy of my great detecting powers. Take a seat madame. Don't speak a word. You have something on your mind. Don't tell me for I can ferret out this simple thing out by deduction."

"Oh, kind sir!" replied the woman as she sank into a chair. "You are a great detective, I know you are, for you are young and handsome, but—"

"Hold!" shouted the great detective. "Say not a word! I am the man who invented the art of deductive. See my finger! You have just your husband's name on your hand."

"But see here!" began the man, but Sherlock Bones silenced him with a gesture.

"But one but, your anxiety about the stocks, your wife's nervousness and lack of jewels, your bare neck with pinholes where the pins should be, the white mark on your fingerless ring, and all this gave the snap away. Ha! You've got to hand it to me! You've got to hand it to me!"

"I'll hand it to you for good and plenty if you don't shut up!" exclaimed the stranger. "We don't need no jockass of a detective. We ain't lost any jewels because we don't own any. We're tourists here from Spook Glen touring in a flivver and all out of gas and we just stopped into ask where was the nearest garage."

It was some minutes after the stranger left before Sherlock Bones aroused himself from his conflicting thoughts.

Walter Gladstone, who recently escaped from the Seattle jail and shot three policemen who pursued him, utilized his trade as a weaver by making a strong rope out of the jail bolts.

Carl Watkins, a painter by trade and burglar by profession, made a "griff" some minutes after the stranger left before Sherlock Bones aroused himself from his conflicting thoughts.

Walter J. Norton, a singer, urged his voice to do high things while the other two hacked at the bars with a bread knife.

CHILDREN TAKE PILLS, CALUMET AND CASTOR OIL

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "does" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, calabar bean. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do to their children. See that it is made their "under little" "insides" are injured by them.

If your child, stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only the delicious "California Syrup of Figs," its action is gentle, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it, that I never fails to clean the little stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits. See here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—Adv.

Bedtime Story for the Little Ones

UNCLE WIGGLY AND THE TABLE.

BY HOWARD R. GARIN.

UNCLE WIGGLY LONGEARS, the nice bunny rabbit gentleman, was spending the evening at the burrow, or underground home of Sammie and Susie Littlebit, the bunny rabbit children. At Uncle Wiggly's hollow stump bungalow, Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, his muskrat lady housekeeper, and Mrs. Wiblewobble, the duck lady, as well as Aunt Lettie, the old lady goat, were knitting socks for soldiers and the dear animal ladies talked so much, and so fast that Uncle Wiggly went out—just as the light does when there is no more gas.

Sammie was studying his home work school lessons and all of a sudden he looked at Uncle Wiggly, who was twinkling his pink nose like some circus lemons, and Sammie asked, "Uncle Wiggly, what's parched corn?"

"Why," asked the bunny, "have you a two times arithmetic table example in parched corn, as Jacko Kinkytail, the monkey boy, had an example last night about soap bubbles and lolly-pops?"

"No; this is my history lesson I'm studying," said Sammie. "It says here that the Indians ate parched corn in winter. What's parched corn?"

"Well, it's something like popped corn only different," said the bunny rabbit uncle. "The Indians used to take the kernels of corn and, instead of popping them, for this was a different kind, and maybe they didn't know how to pop—anyhow they took kernels of corn and made them brown over a fire."

"Do you mean over the gas stove?" asked Sammie's sister Susie who was listening.

"Oh, no, Indians who lived here many years ago did it with the open stoves," said Uncle Wiggly. "They made a fire of wood, or corn cobs and they roasted the corn over that. Parched corn is very good to eat, Sammie. The Indians who used to hunt my rabbit ancestors used to take parched corn with them when they went hunting."

"Did they put it in their pockets?" asked Sammie.

"Indians had no pockets," said Uncle Wiggly with a laugh. "They carried it in a bag. But speaking of parched corn makes me wish I had some. And if you like to come back with me, Sammie, I'll have Nurse Jane parch you some. She knows just how to do it."

"I'll go," said Sammie, who had finished studying his lessons. "I'll get the parched corn with you, Uncle Wiggly."

"Please bring me back some," begged Susie.

"I will," promised Sammie. So he and Uncle Wiggly, with the pink, twinkling nose, set out for the bunny rabbit gentleman's hollow stump bungalow.

"It looks like snow," said Mr. Longears, as he glanced up at the sky—that is as much of it as he could see for it was now night.

"Oh, well, we shouldn't mind the snow if we have parched corn," said Sammie with a laugh.

"They went into the hollow stump bungalow and there Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, the nice muskrat lady housekeeper, marched over to Uncle Wiggly and Sammie. She parched it in a pan over the gas stove for, said she:

"If I made a wood fire, as the Indians had to, it would smoke up the bungalow."

"Very true," agreed Uncle Wiggly. "A gas stove is not so romantic but it is out there for parching corn."

You Can't Brush or Wash Out Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips. Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have. You will find, too, that all itching and itching of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. It can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.
