

A Real American Love Story.

THE HEART BREAKER

By VIRGINIA THURNE VAN DE WATER

Milly Has Tiff With Her Sister, Who Leaves Field to Her When Arthur Bruce Comes to Call in Evening.

CHAPTER XXXV.
None of the perillities of a wife, Milly and Honora Brent, orphan, are characteristically Honora, quiet and dependable, Mildred vivacious and impetuous. Mildred gets all the attention, her admirers being Arthur Bruce, a young man of fine qualities, and Tom Chandler, who is disappointed. She loves to play up against the other heartily, but is practically swept off her feet by Chandler, who knows her on several occasions. Her feelings are turned against him, however, when she sees him, half intoxicated, kissing a painted girl, also under the influence of liquor. Honora, though in love with Bruce, however, decides that he must marry Mildred for Mildred's sake. Honora is so much in love with Bruce, however, that she is thrilled to receive from him a note asking for a long talk with her. She does not tell Mildred the contents of the note, which arouses Mildred's jealousy. During the day, despite a quarrel with Mildred, Honora is enraptured by the thought that she is to see Arthur alone and receive some confidence from him. Honora's emotions were thrilled when, meeting Bruce, he asked her to confidence whether she thought he had any chance of winning Mildred.

Kabibble Kabaret
DEAR MR. KABIBBLE,
I SAW MY FINANCE SITTING IN A MOVING PICTURE THEATRE WITH A BLONDE—WHAT DO YOU THINK OF IT?
SOME BLONDE, IF YOU CAN SEE HER IN A DARK MOVING PICTURE THEATRE!

You certainly are anticipating rather fast, aren't you?
This 'what made you say?' Mildred insisted.
'I was tired, and you were so utterly unreasonable and jealous that I lost my temper,' Honora returned. 'Since you must have the truth, there it is!'
Not an Idea, a Fact.
'I jealous?' Mildred asked. 'What a ridiculous idea!'
'It is not only an idea, it is a fact,' Honora rejoined. 'You are not jealous now, because I have told you once more how Arthur feels about you. But you were jealous this morning when I got a letter from him and again a while ago when you learned I had gone walking with him. It was until I informed you just why he wrote to me, and just what he wanted to talk to me about, that you condescended to be civil to me.'
'Why, Honora?' Mildred exclaimed. 'How cross you are!'
'Tea, I am,' the other acknowledged. 'And I have cause to be. You do as you please, and tell me only what you want to tell me. Yet when I purport the same course, there is a row.'
'I did not row—only I was hurt, because I had thought that Arthur was more fond of me than of you—and then all at once he behaved as if he wasn't.'
'You did not trust him enough to believe in him when he wrote your sister an innocent note?' Honora asked. 'No, Milly—that is a poor way to begin life with a man you are supposed to love.'
Mildred laughed. 'Oh, well, you see I don't really love him yet, but I like him better than any other man. And he likes me so much that I guess I'll learn to care for him.'
'Then, if you do not love him, I do not see why you should be jealous of him.'
'Perhaps I'm a naughty little doggie in the manager's,' Mildred laughed again. 'Anyway, since Arthur's coming tonight I'll dress up and look good for him.'
Which she proceeded to do, however, a little time to herself all the while. Honora changed her own gown and went down to dinner with the dreary certainty that she would spend a lonely evening.
All signs of Mildred's annoyance were gone, and she chatted pleasantly all through the evening meal. The girls were just applying their collars when there was the sound of steps were heard on the front porch.
A Warm Welcome.
'I declare if here isn't Mrs. Higgins!' Mrs. Higgins exclaimed, turning to open the front door.
'Hello, greeted the new arrival enthusiastically. 'Oh, I'm so glad you are here!' she said, kissing the visitor on both cheeks. 'I have missed you ever so much. But what decided you to return so soon?'
'I got home sick,' Mrs. Higgins confessed. 'So I hurried, and I got here and caught the six o'clock train to Palestine.'
'That's the train Honora and I took yesterday,' Mildred commented. 'It's awfully slow, isn't it?'
'Yes, Mrs. Higgins agreed. 'But I do not mind.'
Honora regarded her sister suspiciously all through the evening meal. Different to the recollection of the color, she had had witnessed vulgar love-making she had witnessed on that train 24 hours ago? Yet the child had seemed quite innocuous in the night—and now she was as light-hearted as if it had never happened.
'You're looking very sweet and pretty all dressed up, Milly,' Mrs. Higgins was saying. 'But, Honora, my dear, you are looking rather usual. Don't you feel well?'
'I have a little headache,' Honora smiled.
'I had one before dinner and Honora hadn't. Now I've lost mine and she must have picked it up,' Mildred declared merrily.
'Come in and let Kate get some-thing ready for you to eat,' Mrs. Higgins. 'Honora, urged.
'I had supper before I left Hart, but the waiter said it was all right to take a cup of coffee. I think I will take it up in my room, where I can rest for a few minutes. What are you two going to do this evening?'
'I am going to sit upstairs in your room and read a book,' Mildred answered. 'Milly has an engagement. Arthur Bruce is coming to see her.'
'That's nice,' Mrs. Higgins smiled. 'I'm glad.'
She did not say why she was glad. It might have been because Milly was to have a call from that nice young man, or it might have been because she was to have her favorite charge to herself for a whole evening.

HOROSCOPE

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1915.
EARLY today the sun is in beneficent Libra. After noon will be un- lucky, also for those who seek employment or accept appointments.
There is a sign and to indicate many changes among those who hold positions in the sun, losses of favor through startling exposures and hasty acts being suggested by the stars.
Severe criticism for representatives and especially for senators is pro- voked and the mere prospect that labor will send many representa- tives to Washington.
War mistakes will furnish politi- cal capital at this time, if the stars are well aligned. Misrepresentations and half truths will be encouraged by the planetary government.
Reforms in social matters will be agitated with great persistence from this time on. Women will be criti- cized by their own professional and educational representatives.
New points of view on human rela- tions will be presented by women who will challenge criticism and even cross misplacement, astrologers pre- dict. They will be part of the new era awakening.
Again benefits for the colored race are forecast and recognition of their intellectual as well as industrial at- tainment is promised.
Persons whose horoscope it is have the auspices of a year of financial prosperity. They should not remove or travel if they would reap full bene- fit of the auspices directing them.
Children born on this day are likely to be very clever and talented. These subjects of Libra are often very sensitive to their surroundings and great lovers of beautiful things.

Homer Union Books Are Still Open HOMER UNION books are still open and you still have time to buy stock at par in one of the fastest selling oil companies that has ever been promoted. While you still have time to get in on the ground floor and while HOMER UNION is still on the market, you should buy and buy in the limit, as we expect HOMER UNION to be oversubscribed any day.

We Say "Homer Union Can't Be Beat" When we say that HOMER UNION can't be beat, that is exactly what we mean. We have been selling stocks for a long time but never before in our history have we ever seen an oil stock that so many people wanted. We have thoroughly investigated the holdings of HOMER UNION and it is our honest opinion that they have something mighty good. We predict that they get all and get big oil.
