PROSPERITY COMES HIGH!

During the years 1875 to 1878 the cotton crops of the Southern States sold for from 18 to 22c. per pound; now the market price is 5c. with actual sales on the great cotton exchanges at a figure much lower than this.—Atlanta Constitution.

BUSY CLIFF DWELLERS.

The Pueblo Women Are Literally Empresses of Their Homes.

"The cliff people are a busy folk," writes Hamlin Garland in The Ladies' Home Journal, in an article describing the homes, home life and customs of the cliff dwellers of the southwest—"the most mysterious people in America," as he designates them. "The women grind meal and weave blankets and baskets and make very interesting and often beautiful pottery. The old men make moccasins very deftly, while the younger men go down from the cliff to the fields to tend the growing crop, to watch the struggling corn as it battles against drifting hot sand and against sudden floods—such are the extremities of their climate. Each morning while I was in Hano I heard the men at early dawn go singing down the steep trail—down into the purple plain. Their quavering songs floated up to me with a strange beauty. Each morning, while it was still dark, the women woke me by entering the room where I lay to grind corn, and each night I went to sleep to the regular rhythm of the mealing stone timed to the mystical religious chant of the toiling women.

"Let it be said that there is no woman slaving among these people any more than among the Navajoes. The women are chief property holders. The house is generally the woman's, and descent is through her and not through the father. The men are seldom severe in manner, and in Acoma and Walpi, as well as in Laguna and Zuni, I saw the men taking care of the babies and doing it with great tenderness and smiling patience. I saw no evidence of any severity except in case of the old women. They seemed to be the drudges of the household in Walpi and in Acoma, carrying wood and bottles of water up the steep trail, bent, withered, morose and complaining. They alone of all these people seemed saturnine."

MEDITATIONS OF AN OLD FISHERMAN.

You waves, though you dance by my feet like children at play.

Though you glow, and you glance, and you purr, and you dart,
In the dunes that were warmer than these are the waves were more gay.
When I was a boy, with never a crack in my heart.

The herring are not in the tides as they were of old.

My sorrow! For many a creak gave the creak in the cart

That carried the take to Sliago town to be sold,
When I was a boy, with never a crack in my heart.

And, ah, you proud maiden, you are not so fair when his cart

Is heard on the water, as they were, the proud and apart.

Who paced in the eve by the nets on the pebbly shore,

When I was a boy, with never a crack in my heart.

A PAPER CURRENCY.

Russia for over forty years, ending a few months ago, did the business of the vast empire of 125 millions of people, with fiat paper money. During this period vast strides forward were made by that nation. A railroad five thousand miles in length was built by the government. The government steadily accumulated gold until a vast amount was gathered together—four hundred million dollars' worth or more. But this gold had nothing to do with Russia's money. Within the last twelve months however, the Czar adopted the redemption idea. But on a far more just basis than was our return to specie redemption. Instead of contracting the circulating paper money until it became so scarce it was as dear as gold the Czar reduced the size of the gold coin. The paper ruble was worth about six tenths or seven-tenths of a gold ruble. To equalize their value the Czar reduced the weight of the gold ruble and ordered the gold on hand coined into a new lighter ruble and directed that the government banks exchange gold for paper whenever a change was requested. Had the United States at the close the close of the war resumed specie payment by recoinage each coin dollar into two dollars, it would have done about what Russia has done. While, in establishing a specie basis, the Czar has evidently taken into consideration the debtor and tax-paying classes and the welfare of the people of Russia generally, we believe he will rue the day when he adopted a gold basis, cheap though that basis was made. Making one money redeemable in another is placing business on a quicksand foundation. But the Czar can any day suspend specie redemption and will likely do so if things dont run right. The fact that he has the power and most likely would have the desire to repeal the redemption decree, maybe the means of saving his money system from the manipulations of the money power. A year ago Russia had one billion paper rubles or eight rubles per capita; five million gold rubles or about one-twenty-fifth of one ruble per capita and twenty-five million silver rubles or about one-fifth of one ruble per capita. In addition to this there were fractional silver and copper coins amounting to ninety million rubles or eight-tenths of a ruble per capita, the gold ruble (the ruble of a year ago, not the new light ruble) is equal to seventy-cents in United States gold.—Mo. World.

The Presidential Pendulum.

The last seven presidential election have been carried alternately with the regularity of a four year clock, by each of the two great political parties. The record is:
1872—Grant, republican.
1876—Tilden, democrat.
1880—Garfield, republican.
1884—Cleveland, democrat.
1888—Harrison, republican.
1892—Cleveland, democrat.
1896—McKinley, republican.

In 1900 according to the rule, the president will again be a democrat. Will history repeat itself? And who will be the man?—New York World.

An exchange says: "Town killers are classified into eight separate branches, as follows: First, those who go out of town to do their shopping; second, those who are opposed to improvements; third, those prefer a quiet town to one of push and energy; fourth, those who imagine they own the town; fifth, those who deride public spirited men; sixth, those who oppose every movement that does not originate with them; seventh, those who oppose every movement that does not appear to benefit them; eighth, those who seek to injure the credit or reputation of individuals."
