LET THERE BE NO HESITATION

There is an old story that once upon a time all of the people of the earth agreed to shout together at the same instant, to see how much noise they could make. Watches were carefully adjusted, business cares laid aside and everybody got good and ready for participation in the grand concussion.

Finally the critical moment arrived and instead of a roaring sound going up and splitting the heavens, dead silence reigned.

Everybody was listening to hear the others shout.

Each person expected to enjoy a new sensation and justified his silence by saying that his one weak voice wouldn't have made any real difference in the result.

The story has a bearing upon practical affairs today. Every citizen is expected to raise his voice in protest when things go wrong in governmental affairs, whether of the city, state, or nation. Many, however, decline to make themselves heard and the voice of effective opposition is thus frequently stilled.

In the same way, where a community wants something for its own good and goes after it, as with one voice, it is very apt to attain its desires.

It is the city that RUSTLES that becomes the great city.

You understand what The Times is driving at. It means this:

If the people of Tacoma will, at this time, take a determined stand against a continuance of the Northern Pacific monopoly, which is retarding the growth and prosperity of the city and will raise their voices together in a united demand for MORE RAILROADS, they will get them.

All that is necessary is for the people to GET TOGETHER.

If everybody waits for the other to shout, the old story will be repeated.

The Times has faith in the people of Tacoma. It believes that they are just as wide awake and aggressive as the people in any city in the state of Washington. Hence it believes that they will not be found wanting when it comes to getting what this city needs AND MUST HAVE, MORE RAILROADS.

All other needs are insignificant beside this need.

Take the first step by writing to Jas. J. Hill, St. Paul, or E. H. Harriman, 120 Broadway, New York, and tell them that Tacoma is bent upon getting MORE RAILROADS and end up by asking each to come here and talk matters over with the people. Both Hill and Harriman are often out this way on business and it would be an easy matter to get them both to come to Tacoma, if they felt that the people were in earnest in a desire to get more roads.

Within a few days The Times proposes to suggest a second progressive step in this campaign.

Whether it is to be a long or a short campaign ALL DEPENDS UPON THE PEOPLE.

FATALISTIC HEROISM

The "Old Guard" at Waterloo would die but it would not surrender, and history has paid large tribute to the heroic stand of these gallant Frenchmen; but the scene of fatalistic heroism has been illustrated in these latter days by Japanese soldiers and sailors.

When the Vladivostok squadron sunk the Japanese transport, the Kinshu Maru, scenes of patriotic devotion were witnessed that have no parallel in the brave deeds of knightly encounter. The Japanese officers surrendered but the soldiers refused. They fired their rifles at the Russians, shouting defiance and death until the waves closed over their heads.

They preferred death to capture.

Witness the desperate courage displayed by the Japanese sailors who begged permission to take in the fire-ships in the attempt to bottle up the harbor at Port Arthur.

Under the murderous fire of the Russian batteries ship after ship went down. As they foundered one by one the volunteer crews clambered up the masts and cheered for the emperor of Japan. As each vessel was riddled into a wreck lanterns were waved by sailors to indicate the course to those astern. They were showing their comrades the way to glorious death!

Some of the sailors who came ashore were summoned to surrender. Instead, they sprang forward, revolvers in hand, and died fighting. Others, made prisoners, disemboweled themselves rather than return home disgraced.

Greater determination in the face of death has never been shown in any age.

Martyrology alone affords a parallel.

Such a people may be over-powered and beaten into the earth by superior force. They can never be conquered.

There is nothing small about the people of Tacoma, when it comes to contemplating the prosperity of the city of Seattle. They are glad that such prosperity exists. They also want a duplication of that prosperity in Tacoma, and they realize that the quickest and best, in fact, the only way to secure it, is to get MORE RAILROADS.

Designs for Home-Made Cottage Furniture

The top of a living room table can be hinged at one end to lift up, having a mirror on the underside with a box instead of a drawer to hold toilet articles. The design given is for a fixed top with a drawer. In this particular design the table would be a great deal stiffer and steadier if the drawer were placed in one end instead of in the side, thus allowing of two sidepieces just under the top, screwed in solid to brace the table. The top can be fastened from underneath. The drawer pulls can be whittled out of wood or bent or beaten from copper, brass or iron, with good effect and easily. Store "handles" are all right in a hurry.

The weight of all this furniture can be gauged by the kind of usage it is likely to get. The legs of the table can be made of half of seven-eighths inch stuff, two pieces screwed either side of the cross braces. The crosspieces can project through the legs an eighth or a quarter of an inch with edges beveled slightly, having something of the effect of a mortise and tenon joint without the extra labor.

Heavy-headed iron nails (heads to show), wooden pins or screws can be used to fasten the legs and cross braces together. In the latter place crews can be counter sunk and false dovetail heads set in on top of them, as a sort of decoration.

In making the dowelpins whittle the heads hemispherical in shape, leaving the knife marks, instead of sandpapering them perfectly round and smooth.

This table could be pegged together throughout without the use of nails or screws. The shelf below can be screwed to the lower crosspieces with dovetail heads on the surface, as shown in the perspective drawing (Fig. 1, A), or it can be mortised and wedged in, as shown in the end elevation (Fig. 1, B & C). This looks well, but takes more work.

The slats in the end can be mortised into the edges of the upper and lower crosspieces or can be merely tacked on the sides of the crosspieces, to save labor, as shown in the drawing. This labor-saving idea would not be mentioned if only a single piece of furniture were to be made, but it counts in furnishing a whole cottage.

Notice carefully how the width of the slats and also the spaces between the slats are proportioned. Half of the beauty of the end of the table is due to the spacing of the slats.

MRS. TERRY'S HOUSE GOWN.

Mrs. Terry has a dainty house gown which is as inexpensive and possible as it is pretty. The popular champagne shade is combined with white and a touch of black velvet with a really artistic effect. The material is cotton voile, champagne color. The short vest effect and the undersleeves are of white sheer lawn, with lace insertion. The trimming is a pattern of lace, that she wore on a last year's ball gown. She insists that next year she will separate the lace, using the designs in applique and medallions. The bodice is set onto the little yoke in tiny tufts. Through the lace trimming a single strand of black velvet is run, ending in a knot of velvet at the point of the yoke. The little fleur-de-lis is on the cuff.

TO CLEAN SILKS AND SATINS.

The reason so many people are not successful in cleaning fabrics with gasoline is that they do not use enough of it. If these directions are followed the articles will look as well as if they were sent to a cleaning establishment.

To clean a silk or satin waist or other garments, take a good-sized pan, pour into it at least a gallon of gasoline, then put in the garments, soap the soiled parts thoroughly with a good white soap; then set pan into another larger vessel or tub in which there is enough boiling water to come well up around sides of gasoline pan. The hot water heats the gasoline and with the soap quickly loosens all dirt. Let stand a half hour. Then do not RUB OR WRING, but pick up the garments carefully and dip back and forth in gasoline. When clean put in another vessel, cover with fresh gasoline, which takes away all soap, and rinse thoroughly. Sometimes the second gasoline rinse is necessary. When finished, pick up garment gently, let drip and hang on line in a good sun. Choose a bright day for the cleaning. The
