The Deficit---How and Why Uncle Sam Is Running Behind

By Gilson Gardner. WASHINGTON, D. C., May 27.—As a business proposition the United States government is in a bad way. You are a stockholder in this corporation. You will be interested, therefore, in a little talk about how things stand.

Your corporation is running behind. United States government has now only a small available cash balance. That is, it is small compared to the demands made upon it. The directors of the corporation (your secretary of the treasury and your members of congress) are talking about a $250,000,000 bond issue. What about it? Why is it necessary? What good will this do?

Your corporation is spending more than comes in. Expenses are now running along at about a billion dollars a year. During the last two years the revenues have lagged behind until the deficit now reaches a really huge figure. It will soon be a case of borrow or fall to pay. The credit of United States government is always pretty good. Lots of people are ready at any time to lend on the security of United States government's promise to pay.

Where does the money come from? What are the sources of revenue of our United States government corporation? Answer, duties on imports and receipts from internal revenue taxes. Everybody knows about import duties. That's what the tariff is all about, and goodness knows we've heard enough about the tariff.

Well, what does this tariff produce in money? A recent day by day examination for a month of the customs receipts shows that the treasury took in an average of about $1,000,000 a day. But there is another source of revenue, namely, the direct tax on spirituous liquors, tobacco and snuff. The amount produced by this tax is a little less than half coming in from the customs offices.

Between June 30, 1908, and March 15, 1909, the revenue of the United States government corporation amounted to $415,510,202.93. Expenditures (exclusive of postal expenditures) for the same period of time amounted to $503,688,982.13. The excess of expenditures over receipts was $88,178,779.20. That is the "deficit" for that period. And there was a left-over deficit from the previous fiscal year of $31,640,417.19.

What, Mr. Stockholder, do you propose to do about it? You can issue bonds—that is, you can borrow money—if you feel like it. There is law also left over from the Spanish-American war period which authorizes your secretary of the treasury to issue what are known as certificates of indebtedness up to $100,000,000. These would be in small amounts, and carry 2 per cent interest. But that also is merely borrowing to meet current expenses. And to cap it all, the probability is that the Payne-Aldrich law will reduce the receipts.

So there you are, Mr. Stockholder. How do you like it? NOTICE: All blacksmithing and horseshoeing shops will be closed Saturday.

PLAYTIME STORIES THE FIRST BUTTERFLIES

When this world was created the earth had a soft cloak of green, the prairies had beautiful flowers, the forests, the seas, everything had something to beautify it except the mountains. The Great Spirit thought a long time. At last he made a great number of sparkling stones.

He hid these in the seams of the rocks. "Now," he thought, "when men did into the mountains they will find these stones. Then they will love the mountain also. The little stones were not contented. When the gentle south wind blew over them singing of the beauties of the earth, they loved to go and see for themselves. They begged the Great Spirit for permission. "Yes," he said, "you may; take good care of them," he said to the south wind. So the stones stirred with life and lifted themselves on many men.

colored wings. Joyously they fluttered away on the south wind. To this very day we may still see them, now beautiful, colored butterflies, flitting about in the merry sunshine.
