

CLIFFS OF ICE, GREVASSES AND WIDE GAVERNS STOP MT. M'KINLEY PARTY

No one ever climbed Mt. McKinley from the south. That is the word brought by the Parker-Brown party which returned yesterday from an attempt to scale the peak. The entire party is visiting at the home of Belmont Brown in this city.

"We made every possible attempt to climb the mountain and ascended many smaller peaks but we absolutely satisfied ourselves that the mountain cannot be climbed from the south side," says Brown.

The members of the party were Belmont Brown, Professor Hershel Parker of Columbia university; Waldemar Grassl, Columbia university; Herman L. Tucker, Harvard university and forest service; Professor J. Kuntz, Columbia university; Merle Lavoy, Alaska; John M. Thompson, engineer, and Arthur Aten, Alaska.

The party ascended 10,300 feet and could see the peak with powerful glasses but the sheer cliffs of ice, the gaverns that could neither be crossed nor flanked, simply shut them off from getting up.

Schuyler's Coup Proved a "Coop"

Schuyler Duryee, the Everett man who was a candidate for the U. S. senatorship, has withdrawn. His candidacy was a joke from the start and was never a sincere movement.

Duryee thought there was a chance to get the second choice to apply in the senatorial race and so announced himself a candidate, expecting that as he was unknown and would be considered by all the other candidates as not in it, that he would get the second choice votes of all the rest of the aspirants and that this would elect him.

The supreme court knocked his scheme all out by ruling that second choice voting does not go in the senatorial business. With this chance gone Duryee was out of it, so he withdrew.

JUST SLIGHTLY DAMP; WILL SOON BE DRY AGAIN

Gentle showers that covered most of the Northwest broke the long dry spell yesterday and caused a sigh of relief on the part of the people threatened by forest fires.

In Tacoma .11 of an inch of water fell, starting shortly after noon and continuing until 5 o'clock in the evening. In Seattle there were .02 of an inch, in Portland .08, in Blaine .23, in Helena, Montana, .28, and in Spokane .01.

It was the first real rain in this section since June 19. There have been skiffs of moisture amounting to .01 of an inch a couple of times but not since the middle of June has there been a real soaking for the ground.

The rain yesterday came just right. It was gentle and continuous and soaked in as it fell, completely moistening everything. It has done thousands of dollars worth of good to the truck and berry growers in this section and has put the forest fires in a condition to be easily controlled.

The rain is over, however, now. The weather man reports today that there is no indication of another shower and it may be dry again in a few days.

Everything points to a general clearing up.

Such a Sickness When They Tried to Find Out How Much More Than $4 Apiece Sibley Paid for Votes

So the Millionaire Quick Change Artist and Standard Oil Tool of Pennsylvania Retired as Candidate for Congress Under Fire, and Just When He Was Building a Big House in Washington, Too—And the Constable Has Him, Moreover.

By Raymond Evans.

FRANKLIN, Pa., Aug. 29.—The plight of the Hon. Jos. C. Sibley is particularly embarrassing and annoying. After having had things his own way in his congressional district for nearly a generation for congress that seemed to carry the assurance of election, and after having started to build a big house in Washington, D. C., at a cost of something like $500,000, Mr. Sibley finds to his sorrow that he can't "come back."

Furthermore, Mr. Sibley's estimate of his campaign expenses is very seriously questioned, so seriously that an audit has been demanded by certain people who claim that they have evidence that he spent much more than $42,500; and to him the cup of Mr. Sibley's woe he is arrested, with certain of his political henchmen, on a charge of conspiracy to "debauch, bribe and corrupt" the voters of Warren county. And that, too, after he had withdrawn from the race on account of "ill health."

Mr. Sibley "retired" two years ago, after the publication of the Archbold ("personal and confidential") letters in connection with the Foraker expose. The retirement was regular and formal. Mr. Sibley said he was through with politics, and issued a "farewell address" to the faithful. He said that the people of the district had given him "far more than he deserved"—a naive touch that gave the document a fine flavor of unconscious humor.

Then, after a season of rest from the ardors of public life, Mr. Sibley decided that he would like to try another whirl at serving the people—in the interests of 26 Broadway. And as 26 Broadway couldn't very decently throw down such an old and faithful servant

SIBLEY'S "STYLE."

Here is a letter from Sibley to John D. Archbold, vice president of Standard Oil:

"Personal and Confidential. House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., Nov. 23, 1903.

"My Dear Mr. A.—A (Rep.) United States senator came to me today to make a loan of $1,000. I told him I did not have it, but would try and get it for him and would let him know in a day or two. Do you want to make the investment? He is one who will do anything in the world that is right for his friends if needed.

Please telegraph yes or no. I will give you name when I see you. I don't know but what I ought to come over and see you. Events are crowding and I am on the inside of them, and think I am playing no small hand and want to know whether to go ahead. The nomination of a republican president is not yet settled. No man can safely predict the nominee, and I guess I have got hold of the real situation as closely as any one here.

"If you need me for any purpose telegraph me and I will come over.

Sincerely yours, Jos. C. Sibley."

of OIL, he was suffered to stand for congress once more.

So Mr. Sibley went to work in the good old way, as he had done oftentimes before, and in the primaries of June 4 last he was nominated. The district is solid republican, so Mr. Sibley felt sure of success.

But in the meantime, between the time of Mr. Sibley's "retirement" and his return from Elba, an embarrassing law had been passed by the commonwealth, requiring the filing of a detailed account of campaign expenses, so that the people might be able to get some idea as to the mysterious process by which one gets a non-

JOS. C. SIBLEY'S MANSION IN FRANKLIN, PA.

JOS. C. SIBLEY Ex-Congressman.

When the time set for the audit drew near, after a feverish and fruitless canvass of the district in an effort to gather up ex-post-facto receipts from reluctant citizens who got Sibley money, Mr. Sibley announced his withdrawal from the race, on account of "ill health." No one doubts that Mr. Sibley got cut for his health.

On the day he issued his letter of withdrawal Mr. Sibley was arrested by a constable from Warren county, charged with conspiracy to corrupt the electorate of that county. His private secretary, Frank Taylor, was arrested on the same charge, as were also three of his henchmen in Warren county—C. D. Crandall, Geo. B. Munn and D. M. Howard—who are charged with having received respectively $13,800, $5,000 and $4,000 of Sibley money for distribution.

HE HAS T. R. FOR A CONSTITUENT

WM. W. COCKS

Congressman Wm. Willets Cocks has on constituent of whom he feels proud, and while he does not gorge him with free seeds, he does pay a mighty lot of attention when that constituent addresses a few remarks to the representative from the first New York district. So would most congressmen, for that constituent is no other than the only American ex-president in the land of the living. You've guessed it. It's T. R. all right.

Cocks is a farmer. He has been in the New York senate and assembly, and went to congress in 1905. Farmer Cocks and Farmer Roosevelt are neighbors, which assures Neighbor Cocks of plenty of advice, instructions and orders.

THE ROMANCE OF A COMMON WORD PANTS

"PANTS" are commonly held to be a garment not to be talked of in polite society. When they simply must talk about 'em in public some people get around the difficulty by calling them "unmentionables."

Now, of course there's no real reason why one should not speak of pantaloons as freely as one should speak of a coat or a sweater, and it seems rather strange that people have come to think that there is any such reason. For the pantaloons takes its name from that of a very great and good man, Pantaleon, a Roman scientist, martyr and saint, and the name itself is of very noble derivation, meaning literally, in Greek, "All-Hon."

St. Pantaleon (or Pantaleone) lived about the third century. He was the special physician of the Emperor Galerius. Those were the days before the Roman empire had forsaken the gods of Olympus, the days when the sands of the arena were often wet with Christian blood, and as Dr. Pantaleon was a Christian he finally met the fate of thousands of others who died in those troublous times. So Pantaleon was numbered among the martyrs, in after centuries he came to be numbered among the saints, and finally came to be accepted as the patron saint of the Venetians.

Now, the Venetians seem to have had the honor of being the first pants wearers. At any rate they wore a garment resembling pants some time in the middle ages, and the rest of Europe adopting the garment, named it from the Venetians, "Pantaleon," just as we might call some distinctive garment a "Patrick."

CRIPPEN PLANNED TO KILL HIMSELF

the time the Montrose would be plowing through the St. Lawrence river from Father Point to Quebec. That day he was arrested and the "tonight" he had named for jumping overboard found him in the clutches of the law.

On the homeward voyage Thursday, aboard the Megantic, Dr. Crippen begged his captors to permit him to see Miss Leneve. "I may never see her again," he pleaded. "She has been by only comfort in the last three years."

Dew exacted a promise from the prisoners that they would not try to converse. On an upper deck, accessible only to the officers of the liner, the rescued men and the girl met. Both were overcome with emotion and Crippen could scarcely speak a word of greeting. With his hands within earshot he briefly bade her god-bye. Miss Leneve was led fainting to her stateroom and Crippen spent the rest of the day in moody silence.

At the hearing before the magistrate today Crippen was charged formally with the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore Crippen. The prosecution announced that it would proceed against Miss Leneve only as accessory after the fact, being convinced that she knew nothing of the alleged murder until after it had been committed. Miss Leneve also was charged with having assisted, maintained and harbored a fugitive from justice.

NEW METHODS WILL MAKE TOTAL BIGGER

Building Inspector George Trust has devised a new form of application for building permits which he hopes will more clearly reveal the exact cost of new construction. Heretofore the building records have not been what they should because citizens did not report the total cost of construction when getting permits.

A building that was to cost $10,000 was put in at that or less when there was possibly $2,000 more in plumbing and other extras to go in later.

The new forms are expected to cover everything, and should help to swell the building reports to their proper proportions.

BRAKEMAN'S JOKE IS CAUSE OF SUIT

IOWA CITY, Ia., Aug. 29.—One of the biggest damage suits ever instituted against the Rock Island Railroad company is on trial in the district court. Elma Johnson of Bloomfield, Iowa, is suing for $30,000 damages.

She avers that a brakeman threw a torpedo from a train while running past her father's farm, near Bloomfield, in May, 1909, and that there was a note attached to the deadly missile. After reading the note she innocently attempted to open the torpedo. It exploded and blew out one of her eyes.
