

SMUGGLED TO SAVE LIFE OF HIS DAUGHTER

H. W. Price, 60 years old, stood before Judge Donworth yesterday afternoon.

He had smuggled opium over the British Columbia line.

"I am guilty, your honor," he said. "I smuggled the opium over hoping to get money to pay for an operation on my daughter. I have never broken the law before and never been arrested but my daughter is sick and I wanted to help her." and the old man handed a letter to the court from his son-in-law in which he had told of his daughter's sickness and the necessity for an operation.

Judge Donworth looked at the prisoner and then at the letter. The law says those who bring opium into the country must be sentenced, and it makes no exception in the cases of old men who want to save their daughters' lives.

"I will defer action until next Monday," said the judge and Price took his seat.

Fred Worth, who also was caught with a satchel full of opium, pleaded not guilty and will be tried November 2.

PLEADS GUILTY TO MURDER OF TWO

With his Indian wife and three little children in court Fred Pope, the Quinault Indian, appeared before the federal bench yesterday afternoon and pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree of Hoh Williams and Adam Hawk, two Indian police on the Quinault reservation.

Pope had always borne a good reputation and was industrious and well liked. The tragedy in which he figured came as the climax to an attempt made, it is charged, to drive him from the community so others could get his valuable holdings. Pope was charged with a crime against a girl on the reservation. It is said the report was circulated by Hawk and Williams. Pope was not guilty and the injustice rankled him and he laid in wait for the pair and shot them both to death.

He will be sentenced next Monday.

Boys Fight Over Girl

Anyway Tarbell may not think a blackened eye and battered face so bad when he can retain the affections of the girl for whom they were received. In this forlorn condition Wm. Tarbell of 3631 East I street, presented himself before Judge Chapman of the superior court yesterday charging Gaylord Kelly of the same street with assault. Both boys had been striving for the affections of the same girl and so decided to settle it once for all in a battle of fists. Both were dismissed on a reprimand from the judge.

He had taken the contents and died on the way to the police station.
