

JINGLINGS TO APPEAR

Jingling Bros. circus, under the management of the Y. M. C. A. boys, is "coming to town." Two performances will be given, one Thursday and one Friday night. Close to 150 of Manager Carter's young athletes will appear in the cast, and there will be 52 distinct acts, including the performances of an army of 20 clowns, a horse quadrille, trained animals, bareback riders, acrobats and many other regulation circus features. The entertainment proper will be preceded by a concert by the Tacoma Military band.

FAIRY PLAY WILL BE DIFFERENT

The announcement has been made that Mrs. Thayer's pupils will not dance at the performance of "Once Upon a Time" tonight. This will eliminate one of the most enjoyable parts of the show. Among those who will not dance at the presentation of the play tonight are Miss Dorothy Kershaw, Miss Wagner and Miss Keen.

To the Voters of Tacoma

I wish to announce myself as a candidate for commissioner of finance at the recall election to be held Tuesday, May 2.

Being one of framers of the new charter, I am heartily in sympathy with it, and would insist that all provisions therein be put in force.

I believe Tacoma workmen, contractors and manufacturers should be favored in Tacoma municipal work.

NO 30-DAY CLAUSE IN TAFT'S SECRET ORDER, SO GUGGENHEIMS GOT QUICK ACTION IN ALASKA

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Today's developments explain how it was possible that nobody knew until last week of President Taft's order turning over the Cunningham and other Alaska coal fields to the Morgan-Guggenheim syndicate. The whole process by which eliminations are made from forest reserves are reversed in this case. The lands were eliminated by executive order instead of by the usual process of presidential proclamation.

This executive order process never has been applied by President Taft to any other elimination from a national forest. It was used last in 1908 by President Roosevelt before the method of proclamation was developed.

Another remarkable thing about the executive order which turns over the shore of Controller bay to the Guggenheims is the fact that it was so drawn as to make the withdrawal land immediately available for occupation by agents of the Guggenheims. The order did not contain the usual so-called "thirty day" clause. This runs as follows:

"The lands shall not become subject to entry, filing, selection or other form of application until the expiration of 30 days from the date so fixed, and no person will be permitted to gain or exercise any right whatever under any settlement or occupation began prior to such date and all such settlements and occupations are hereby forbidden."

The above restriction always goes with proclamations restoring lands to entry in order that there may be no collusion which will benefit persons who are on the inside and who might with secret knowledge take advantage of the option to file claims and get possession before an option was so given to the general public. It was not in the order opening the Controller bay lands.

As recently as March 30, 1911, President Taft issued a proclamation for the elimination of certain lands from the bounds of the Fish Lake and Glenwood forest reserve in Utah. In this proclamation the 30-day restriction was included. In two instances only has President Taft eliminated lands by executive order and in one of these instances he wrote into the order a 30-day restriction on filing of settlement. The other, the single instance in which this precaution was omitted, is the case involving the tidewater front of Controller bay, which was wanted for the coal railroad terminal.

All of which explains why the forest service and the conservation people, who are on watch generally, were in ignorance of this coup of the Guggenheims. The matter was taken entirely from the jurisdiction of the forest service and the lands were withdrawn by a secret executive order signed by President Taft and made immediately effective.

Glory and Glitter for General; Only a Clerk Last December

Ramon F. Iturbe, Emulating His Patriot Grandfather, Does Great Things for the Insurrecto Cause.

EL PASO, TEXAS, April 26.—"Iturbe" is an honored name in Mexico. Two generations ago there was an Iturbe who was a great patriot and his memory is very dear to the common people of the republic.

Now the name "Iturbe" bids fair to take on a newer luster. For Ramon F. Iturbe, the youngest who has spread insurrection all over the Durango district, and who has now under his command an army of perhaps 1,500 men is a grandson of the Iturbe who first endeared the name to the people of Mexico.

Ramon Iturbe is a mere boy. Four months ago he held a clerical position in the Culiacan jail. In January he persuaded some of the prison guards to enter into a scheme for releasing the prisoners and making of them the nucleus of a rebel army.

The firing of a rifle at midnight was to be the signal for the uprising. Makes Get-Away. Thirty minutes before the hour set for the delivery two policemen appeared before Iturbe with an order for his arrest.

He pulled a revolver and covered the officers while he gained a 30-day restriction on filing of claim. He ran to the Tamazula river, forded it, secured a horse and made his get-away, riding to the camp of Juan Banderas, an escaped criminal who had already started an uprising.

Presently Iturbe and Banderas had collected an army of 200 men, with which they captured Tamazula. Then, having leveled upon that town, they raided that section of Durango west of the divide.

Antonio Chalde, the celebrated chief of police of Topia, secretly prepared to join Iturbe with the men under his command. His plan was exposed and Chalde was thrown into prison.

Then Iturbe and Banderas gathered an army of 600 men and made a swift and effective move on Topia. They blew their way through to the Plaza with successive blasts of dynamite and then overwhelmed the garrison with a rush.

All the funds in public offices were confiscated, government records were burned, something like $40,000, Mexican, was wrung from the unwilling hands of the moneyed folks in the town and all the prisoners, including the captive chief, Chalde, were released.

Iturbe's operations savor something of the methods of the bandit, but as they have all been anti-federal, the insurrectionists count him as one of them.
