

Gynthia Grey's After-Supper Talks.

"GUIDANCE" Should Be the Mother's Watchword and Not "DISCIPLINE."

If you are a stickler for discipline, much discipline, spelled with 10 great big capital letters, and believe that discipline is the material to be used in laying a good strong foundation for the building of your small daughter or small son's life, read Kipling's piteous little child story, "Baa, Baa, Black Sheep." Just read it. And having read it, take a backward look at your relationship with your own small son or daughter.

Guidance and companionship is what children need, not discipline. If there is never any guidance and companionship elements in their small lives, perhaps the necessity for discipline will arise and grow; but starting right; with understanding of the child mind, and the child viewpoint, and with a desire to establish and maintain the relation of comrade to your child, the word discipline may be taboo in the household vocabulary.

Kipling's lovable and entirely normal little "Black Sheep" was done to death by over discipline, administered with a cruel mind and hand.

Later there came a change and love came back to him; but all the love and tenderness in the world could never blot out the memory of the cruel years, or make the little soul quite the same, for the scar was there. Faith and trust in the goodness of the entire world and everybody, had been shaken, and forever and ever in the child mind there must be a germ of doubt and a shrinking of suspicion and fear.

Of course real mother love and father love form the necessary main spring and motive power for proper understanding and guidance. Not sentimentality merely, but the great big deep real parent love.

TODAY'S JOKE IN BLACK AND WHITE

"Mamma," said little Ethel, with a discouraged look on her face, "I ain't going to school any more." "Why, dearie, what's the matter?" the mother gently inquired. "'Cause it ain't no use at all. I can never learn to spell. The teacher keeps changing the words on me all the time."—Success Magazine.

WASH VEILS OFTEN

Veils need washing because they become more or less damped by the breath. This causes dust to adhere. In the dust microbes swarm. To breathe through a veil that has not been washed since its last being used is to risk catching any one of many disorders—bronchitis, influenza and pneumonia being examples. On the other hand, a veil that has been washed after its removal, may serve as a comparatively safe filter for dust-laden air.

THE IDEAL WOMAN

A Paris newspaper is holding a contest to determine what is considered the most essential quality in an ideal woman. Kindness of heart is in the lead by a big majority, and next in order come devotion, economy, intelligence, amiability, patience and modesty. Humility and cleanliness have received but few votes.
