BY SANTA CLAUS. TOYLAND, Aug. 10.—Here I am again and I've got something to say to the boys and girls of Tacoma. You may think it's a long time to Christmas, but Christmas will be here before you realize it.

I'll have a choice line of dolls and toys for this Christmas and I want every kid to have time to make a selection.

I've been so badly rushed the last few years I haven't been able to make my dolls in my own factory up here in Toyland. I've had to get help from Germany.

The little town of Sonneberg, in Meiningen, southeast of Leipzig, is where the dolls come from now. There Germans have improved on my old methods too. Meiningen dolls are like real babies. The people who make them take a live baby and hire a sculptor to make a clay figure like it. Then they make a mould from the figure and make the dolls from the mould.

They make lots of different kinds of dolls—"character dolls." Instead of being merely a boy or a girl doll, their dolls are like real children. They make Little Red Riding Hoods, Highland lasses and laddies, peasant boys and girls, sailors, nurses, cooks and many others.

One of the cutest is the "bathing doll." I'm going to give away a lot of them this year, for they're new and will be lots of fun.

I've opened an exhibit of my dolls and toys at Marshall Field's big wholesale store in Chicago, so

Wife Got Tip Top Advice "My wife wanted me to take our boy to the doctor to cure an ugly boil," writes D. Frankel, of Stroud, Okla. "I said, 'Put Buckle's Arnica Salve on it.' She did so, and it cured the boil in a short time." Quickest healer of Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Corns, Bruises, Sprains, Swellings. Best Pile cure on earth. Try it. the commercial public, which always follows my styles, may know what to buy. On the fifth floor may be found my Wright's aeroplane, a new toy this year that sells for from 25 cents to $1.50. It will really fly, too. Another novelty is my autosled. With one of these a boy or girl can coast like lightning on the level. They would cost $2.75 if you could buy them anywhere. I used to bring magic lanterns to boys and girls but my moving picture machine beats that all hollow. They'd cost $6 apiece at the store. Of course, I've only given you a partial list. There'll be a great many more new things besides all the old standbys. So long. See you Christmas eve.

Cold Dishes for Hot Days

Cocoa Egg-nogg. Beat the white of 1 egg until stiff and add gradually white heating constantly 1 teaspoonful of sugar, 1 teaspoonful of breakfast cocoa and a few grains of salt. Add to half the mixture while heating constantly three-fourths of a cupful of cold milk. Turn into a glass and pile remainder of liquid on top.

Cabbage Salad. Shred a white cabbage fine and pour over it a dressing such as you make for cold slaw or French dressing with a little made mustard beaten in it.

Egg Milk Shake. Put 2 tablespoonfuls of finely crushed ice in a glass, add 2 1/2 tablespoonfuls of sirup, 1 egg and two-thirds of a cup of milk. Shake thoroughly and strain into glass for serving. A little nutmeg or cinnamon may be added if desired.

Cynthia Grey's Letters

Dear Miss Grey: Will harem skirts become as popular as was the hobble skirt? Will they be worn this fall? (2) How can I bronze an imitation marble statue? (3) You say that it is improper for young people to spoon. How many girls above 16 do you think have not spooned? (4) What will be the next fashion in shoes?—Minnie.

A.: (1) Harem and hobble skirts are both things of the past. (2) When you buy the bronze the druggist will tell you how to mix and apply it. (3) Many. And they are the ones most highly respected by the opposite sex, beyond a doubt. (4) That's a question only the shoe dealers can answer.

Dear Miss Grey: I am on my feet all day, and they swell and pain at the end of the day. What will relieve them?—Working Girl. A.: Take a hot footbath as soon as you are at liberty. Rub well with alcohol afterward and dust with talcum powder or corn-starch.

Dear Miss Grey: (1) What is love? (2) When a man whom you do not care for, asks to take you out, how can you refuse without hurting his feelings?—Reader.

A.: (1)—"Unless you can muse in a crowd all day. On the absent face that fix'd you; Unless you can love as the angels may. With the breadth of Heaven bewixt you— Oh, never call it loving." (2) Simply tell him that it is impossible for you to accept.

Dear Miss Grey: Please help a new housekeeper out of her difficulties. (1) What is the proper arrangement of dining chairs in the room when not in use? (2) I have a very nice dinner set. Would it be in good taste to arrange it in my china cabinet? (3) Please suggest a cover for my buffet. It is mahogany and beautiful grain, and I do not want to cover it entirely. (4) Name a good book on home-decoration. (5) My furniture is all mahogany, but my flat very ordinary. The woodwork is cherry. There is a small mantel and fireplace in the living room. Shall I drape it?—Housewife.

A.: (1) Place them about the room not too formally, but well back out of the way. One chair may be placed under each end of the table. (2) It is the rule to fill the cabinet with choice pieces of glass and china which are infrequently used. If your dinner set were kept there, the cabinet would look rather bare when the china is in use. (3) Crocheted mats of white, either oblong or

SHE IS MOTHERLESS

She parted with her "woman's crowning glory" to gain freedom! She is only a very little woman, a child of 14, but the feminine love of admiration begins early. It doubtless took grim courage, perhaps even secret sullen anger, to give the ugly clash of the sharp shears that covered the first long brown lock from the head of the little Helen McBride.

The city where Helen lives matters little. The story of the child is one that is too often heard in the great rushing, hustling cities of our broad, free land. But it is not every child that has the courage to despoil her fairness in her effort to be free.

The child is motherless. She lives in an institution. That is all that needs to be said to any heart that throbs with sympathy.

There was to be a picnic, a gay, happy, long day spent out in the green woods 'neath cloudless blue skies. The boys and girls of the institution were to have free hours far from the confining walls of their institutional home.

One of the duties of Helen is to care for the babies of the institutional nursery. It was all well enough to look after one's own little brothers and sisters when one's own true mother assures you that you are "helping" her. But poor little Helen had not grown to the universal spirit. She does not know that all the babies in the world are her wee brothers and sisters, that the universal love should make her want to do for them as for her very own.

So the day before the wonderful picnic, her mind would wander to all the mysteries that the next day held for her. It wandered so persistently that she neglected the babies, poor child, and for punishment the institutional friends decided that the happy day in the woods must be denied her.

Now, one's own mother would have put her tender, loving arms about the child and softly told her that the future day would be as bright as if the duties of the moment were neglected. But Helen is motherless and the institution believed she must be disciplined.

When the picnic day dawned Helen was sullen and silent. She could not wish her playmates a happy day in the country. All her thoughts were of her own small wrongs. She decided that she must run from the institution, must go far out in the big wide world and make her way.

Then, poor little girl, she thought, as many an older woman has, that her sex was against her. She borrowed boys' clothing from the closet in the boys' ward, hurriedly donned them and then she shorn her pretty girlish head of her long dark tresses.

But even the outward and visible signs of man's emancipation did not avail Helen; the child shyly slipped down the street an officer of the police detected the girlish figure and Helen was brought back to further punishment for the new and additional sin.

Any child that is motherless is to be pitied. Even a bad mother is better than an institution. It is to be hoped that the institutional friends will perceive that Helen is a girl worthy of tender care and thoughtful love.

A girl that is brave enough to part with that which the masculine ages have always considered her greatest beauty, and who realizes, at the immature age of 14, that when her time comes to go in the wide world, she is handicapped is worth loving. She is a girl of character and action. Kindness, sunshine, understanding, in fact, love should save her.

GIRLS BARRED BY RAILROADS OTHER BIG FIRMS WANT THEM

The big railroads of the country have locked their doors against the women folk. They don't want 'em hanging 'round making eyes at the trousered office help, chewing gum and talking all the time. The consensus of opinion among railroad officials is that: Girls are inclined to flirt and waste their time. They primp, powder and manure during business hours.

They chatter and tie up the busy telephone lines, as they get efficient. They hold places of men who could go up in the service. The Southern Pacific started the war on the feminine office force with an order that no more girl stenographers shall be employed. The Burlington, the New York and other big systems fall into line.

Girls may or may not be a success in the railroad business, but they are there with the bells on the rest of the business world. The big mail order houses say they couldn't get along without them. These business men unanimously champion the girls' cause because, they say: Girls are reliable, quick to learn and efficient. They mind their own business, don't smoke, chew tobacco and talk baseball.

They leave their positions more frequently than men, but are easier to replace. They have a great capacity for details than men. As stenographers and clerks they are more polite and pleasant to associate with. Their quick sympathy and intuitive powers in times of business crises make them indispensable.
