The Dollar and the Cross

We are going to have a big religious revival led by men whose combined wealth runs into hundreds of millions. J. P. Morgan and Labor-Crusher Post are at the head of it. The movement will be "organized by business men on business lines" and is to beat anything in the history of the human race since the days of the Reformation.

Which is really going some! Now, why this sudden access of spirituality on the part of Organized Dollars? Why have the multi-millioned leaders of American business got religion at this particular juncture? Why are they so determined to ram it down the throats of all the rest of us?

In his work on "Social Evolution", Benjamin Kidd thus defines religion:

"A religion is a form of belief, providing an ultra rational sanction for that large class of conduct in the individual where his interests and the interests of the social organism are antagonistic, and by which the former are rendered subordinate to the latter in the general interests of the evolution which the race is undergoing."

That perhaps, is a little abstruse—hard to get hold of and digest—though it states a great historical and philosophical truth. Try it this way:

You are having a devil of a time in this world trying to get enough to eat. If the country goes to war, you do the fighting and leave your wife and babies to struggle alone. In the piping days of peace, you live, perhaps, in a tenement and work in a sweatshop. But it's all right.

From the blood-stained field, the squalid tenement, the stifling sweatshop and factory, you look upward comforted by the conviction that beyond your earthly horizon lie peace, happiness, and eternal reward for those who bear their present burdens with meekness and fortitude—and are dead.

Do you get it? Your fathers and grandfathers got it, all right. And you are going to get it if the "biggest revival in human history" can pound it into your thick old head.

My, how those "boy orators" do age! Here's Albert Jeremiah Beveridge, the "Plow Boy of DePauw," celebrating his 49th birthday today.

and even though more youthful of our happy birthday celebrators can remember when the senate snubbed the progressive Indian because of his youth. Still and albeit, there are many more good fighting years in Beveridge's reserve fund, and if he isn't in the thick of the people's battle for common honesty and common prosperity, everybody along the Wahash is dopping it out wrong, which they are not.

FROM DIANA'S DIARY

As a Camera Lady on the "Daily Sneeze" Miss Dillpickles Becomes Tangled Up in a Romance of the Frivolous Rich.

She came to the office and commenced crabbing about me to the manager.

For the last couple of days I've been busy snapshotting aviators and fire rums and politicians instead of topnotch society, and thought no more of the Van Svelte-Scadsborough romance, least of all that it would come and hunt me up.

All at once I found myself yanked right back into the vortex of it. If a vortex is something that makes you dazed and dizzy.

It seems that the fair fiancée has a mother, old Mrs. Graboff-Van Svelte, who is Gladys' manager, as it were. The wise talk is that she engineered the capture of Lancelot Scadsborough and that Gladys merely did the necessary stalling. Be that as it may, old Mrs. Graboff-Van Svelte is scared green for fear that Lancelot will take a bug notion to marry someone else before the splic is effected. She heard of the merry session at the country club where Lancelot put a white rat in my camera to get a big laugh out of the crowd. Furthermore, she figured that was just Lancelot's good grocers.

Of course the manager took anything but a coupon clipper's view of it and told her that I was lucky for Scadsborough that I took the joke like a good fellow, because I could have made a lot of trouble for him if I'd wanted to get ugly about his refined brand of playfulness.

I'm beginning to feel sorry for rattle-brained Lancelot Scadsborough in spite of his gobs of gelt. Just look at the mother-in-law he's going to have!

TODAY IN HISTORY

We left our hero, Gen. John M. Corse yesterday just after he had written a sassy letter to his confederate besieger at Allatoona. The fighting was at its worst at the hour at which the Daily Times goes to press, but October 6, 1861, however, disgraced, Corse was still sassy. "I am short a cheek bone and an ear," he wired Col. L. M. Dayton, of Gen. Sherman's staff, "but am able to whip all h—ll yet."

The girl who hesitates is lost, and when she doesn't hesitate some guy is lost.
