

ADMITS CRIME WITHHOLDS NAME

(By United Press Leased Wire.)
 (CHICAGO, Wash., Jan. 1.—) Hoping to discover the identity of the 22-year-old robber who shot and killed President Lawrence Bar, of Farmers and Merchants bank of Centralia Saturday night, when Bar offered his attempted holdup of the institution, Sheriff Foster today sent broadcast descriptions of the young fellow.

In the county jail here today the man who says he came to the Pacific coast a year ago from New York state, freely admits he killed Bar and declares that his love of poker led to his present predicament.

The young man said he was anxious to plead guilty to murder and "have it over with."

He said he decided to attempt the robbery after he had been relieved of his savings, $350, by gamblers in Seattle.

The robber says he will not divulge his identity because of his desire to keep the knowledge of his crime from his parents, brothers and sisters.

"I wish the old man had killed me when he had the drop," said the stranger. "I wanted to run but he kept coming toward me and I finally decided the only thing I could do was to shoot."

Bar's slayer is 5 feet 10 inches in height, has light hair, blue eyes and smooth face.
