Only A Miner's Daughter

Being a Short Story of How a Beautiful Young Girl Lived and Died in the Great Kingdom of West Virginia.

By Mother Jones.

In 1902 one of our organizers went up into the mountains of West Virginia to organize the miners. He returned in a few hours. I asked him why he came back so soon, and he said: "The superintendent got a gun and chased me down and told me not to come back there again. I didn't come out here to get killed, Mother."

I concluded to go up and meet that superintendent. I got off at one of the little mining towns and stayed all night with the family of a miner, gathered up 8 or 10 of the union miners and the next morning we started up the mountain.

It was a six-mile walk, straight up, and it was noon when we got up here. I said to the boys: "Go down and tell the miners that I am going to have a meeting up here at 2 o'clock, and tell that superintendent that I will feel highly honored by his presence also."

While I was sitting on a rock a man came out of an old log cabin and motioned for me to come over. I went and shook hands with him, and found that he was a miner from Ohio. I went in, and there I saw, oh, such a beautiful young girl lying on a pallet of straw with a clean patched quilt spread over her. I think I never gazed on a more sublimely beautiful face than here in my life. I turned to the father and asked:

"Mountain fever?" He said, "Yes, she is sick, but not fever, it is consumption." "I could not make enough at the mines," he continued, "to take care of these six children" (four of them were sitting around the fire), "so we concluded to let the girl go down and work. I went down a month ago and brought her up. This is all I've got left of her. They worked her to death."

He broke down, and she said from her dying pillow: "Papa, don't cry, I'll be better some day."

"There was a little bottle of medicine by her bed. She took it up and said, 'Mother Jones, that cost a dollar.' I said, 'Well, what of it, if it does you good,' and she replied, 'Yes, but it would have bought the children so much.'"

We had the meeting. The superintendent did not show up, but a lot of his men did. We organized them all at the close of the meeting, and I bade them goodbye and told them I would be back inside of ten days. I went over to bid the young girl goodbye, and she looked at me and said: "Mother Jones, I used to go down that mountain, and thought it fun, but I'll never go again. I will never see you again, mother, goodbye."

Next morning when the father went to the mine the superintendent told him to take his time and leave. He said to him: "You entertained that woman agitator yesterday and you cannot work in our mines." In vain did the father explain my visit to his dying daughter. He got his time, but no money. That company gives the men the time and keeps the cash. He went home broken-hearted and told the mother.

They only had three days in which to vacate the shack, for the company owns every shingle on it, and sometimes there are not so many shingles on it, either. The girl dropped back and died as the father told of his discharge and that they must move at once.

The father went out to the out-house and taking the boards from that made a coffin, wrapped his dead daughter in a sheet and laid her to rest in the mountain.

Bowels Are Basis Of Child Health

The careful mother, who watches closely the physical peculiarities of her children, will soon discover that the most important thing in connection with a child's constant good health is to keep the bowels regularly open. Sluggish bowels will be followed by loss of appetite, restlessness during sleep, irritability and a dozen and one similar evidences of physical disorder.

A first sign of such disorder give the child a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at night on retiring and repeat the dose the following night if necessary—more than that will scarcely be needed. You will find that the child will recover its accustomed good spirits at once and will eat and sleep normally.

This remedy is a vast improvement over salts, cathartics, laxative waters and similar things, which are altogether too powerful for a child. The homes of Mrs. E. S. Griffin, Sandy, Utah, and Mrs. Clara McIntosh, Masonville, Colo., are always supplied with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and with them as with thousands of others, there is no substitute for this grand laxative. It is really more than a laxative for it contains superior tonic properties which help to tone and strengthen the stomach, liver and bowels so that after a brief use of it all laxatives can be dispensed with and nature will do its own work.

Anyone wishing to make a trial of this remedy before buying it in the regular way of a druggist at fifty cents or one dollar a large bottle (family size) can have a sample bottle sent to the home free of charge by simply addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 405 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Your name and address on a postal card will do.

EXPLOSION IN BURNETT MINE

Joe Majout, a Slavonian miner, was killed and seven others burned or bruised but not seriously, by an explosion yesterday afternoon in the Pacific Coast Coal company mine at Burnett, 25 miles east of here. Majout was blown into a coal chute and the coal fell down on him smothering him. He was married but had no children. A broken miner's lamp is supposed to have caused the trouble. The mine is working as usual today.
