FIRST CARTOONS FROM PANAMA CANAL; SEEING FUNNY SIDE OF AMERICA'S DITCH

HERE'S CORY

You have seen the canal written about, the canal photographed, the canal sketched, the canal Sunday-supplemented, the canal muck-raked, the canal magazine and the canal lady-reported, BUT YOU HAVE NEVER SEEN THE CANAL CARTOONED

And now it's going to be cartooned for fair by Cartoonist J. Campbell Cory, especially for The Times.

Cory is at this minute on the canal making pictures. Pictures of people who work on the ditch and pictures of people who refuse to work at all. Pictures and cartoons in Cory's most humorous vein. And then there's "Uncle Dud," who will assist Cory by writing pieces to go with the funny artist's cartoons. You know Uncle Dud, we hope. If you don't, take a look at this picture. Then look at Cory's phiz. Both were drawn by Cory when he landed at the canal.

Cartoonist Cory and "Uncle Dud" have their wife with them. Watch Monday's Times for their first stunt-story and pictures of their voyage from New Orleans to the place where the American nation is CUTTING THE THROAT OF A HEMISPHERE.

TO CONNECT THE PLANTS OF 2 CITIES

The city commission got more real insight into the municipal light and power business in an hour with J. D. Ross of Seattle yesterday afternoon than it has gotten in months of discussion with the local officials.

"I tell you we are beginning to get to the meat in the coconut now," said Mills after the conference.

Ross presented in detail the methods pursued by him in the management of the Seattle municipal plant. His rate card was a technical affair that needed considerable explanation to the laymen. When he got through, however, the commissioners began to see light dawning.

The commissioner and Ross both agreed the thing to do was connect the plants of the two cities. Both have surplus current, and will be able to protect each other in case of breakdowns.

Ross went into detail on his commercial department. He said the city never misrepresented anything. It did a square business, and despite the false representations of the power monopoly they had kept plenty of business.

Ross did not urge any attempt to heat houses. "That is a dream of the future," he said. It may be made feasible in the near future, but just now it is hardly practicable. But for cooking, domestic power of all kinds and for small factories he urged a low rate to get the business. He cooks in his own home at Seattle and has a laboratory and shop he runs with the juice in which he is developing new ways of using power to extend the business.

In his chemical laboratory he is developing new uses of electricity in the manufacture of chemicals that promise big things. "You will probably see the location of some big chemical manufacturing out here very soon," said Mr. Ross.

Ross left all his data with the commissioners, and they will take it up, make a rate and then organize a commercial department to go after the business.

The commission has practically decided it is time for the whole commission to take a hand in the light and water business.

POLICE ORDER FAIR VIVIAN OUT OF TOWN

Vivian Lyons, who has been ordered out of San Francisco by the police.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 22.—Mrs. Vivian Merlyn Lyons, who shot Robert J. Widney, a Los Angeles realty operator, in her rooms in the Sorrento hotel, and who was freed of the charge, will be ordered to leave town by the police. Captain of Detectives Mooney said today that he believed her to be a "dangerous woman," and that she must go.

This decision followed a request of Mrs. Lyons for a number of her photographs and letters which were turned over to the police at the time of her arrest. These have the names of several prominent men upon them and were to be used by Mrs. Lyons as evidence had Widney prosecuted her.

The woman pleaded with the captain to return the letters and documents, but he told her that he would burn them. He did not tell her, however, that he would order her from the city.

The Real Washington

By Berton Braley

Let us have done with tales that limn George Washington a seraphim, He was no pale ascetic saint Such as old masochists loved to paint The man who set our country free Was big and strong as men should be, A friend whom any man could prize A godly sight for women's eyes, A soldier brave, a statesman wise, Who faced whatever fortune came And did his best and played the game

That was the sort of man to fling Defiance at a tyrant king, A man of gleaming flesh and blood Who had no fear of storm and flood, Who held his tapered army knife, By simple human nerve and grit, Who dared at times to take a chance And conquered fate and circumstance.

This mortal made of common sod, Is greater than a demi-god, That we have worshipped overlong In foolish story and in song, Let us forget our markish awe And see him as his fellows saw, A member of the human clan And every single inch a MAN!
